LINER YALE IN COLLISION

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Lackawanna ferryboat Bergen, crowded with commuters, crashed into the big Metropolitan steamer Yale to-day, 150 yards outside her slip at the foot of Christopher street.

The starboard side of the ferryboat containing the woman's cabin smashed into the stern of the steamship with great force, and panic reigned until the Bergen made her dock.

Ferryboat Changes Course.

The Bergen was crossing North river from Hoboken, while the Yale was lying north and south just outside her own dock next to the ferry slips awaiting orders to come in after a trip from Boston. The Bergen tried first to cross the Yale's bow, then changed her course and swept around toward the steamer's stern, but failed to clear it.

The Bergen's port side struck the Yale's overhang a terrific blow.

The windows fore and aft of the paddle box were smashed in and the paddlebox itself was badly damaged. The life raft and a lifeboat on the hurricane deck of the ferryboat were swept from their fastenings and into the river. The women's cabin on the Bergen was well filled with passengers. They rushed hither and thither when the crash came, most of them shrieking and shouting for help. Several of the women fainted.

Rush for Life Belts.

Captain Groves of the Bergen ordered the deckhands to the women's cabin to quiet the panicstricken passengers. Many of them frantically tore life preservers from where they were fastened and put them on. Everyone on the ferry boat thought it was going to the bottom. The deckhands and a number of the men passengers who had not lost their heads went to the assistance of the terrified women. They helped them out of the woman's cabin to the other side of the boat.

Investigation showed that the Bergen was not badly enough damaged to be in any danger, and an attempt was made to quiet the passengers. Meanwhile Captain Groves ordered all speed on, and the ferryboat went ahead toward her slip. Women were still sobbing hysterically when she made the dock, and many of them had to be helped to the ferryhouse.

As soon as the passengers had been landed the Bergen was taken across the river again and put out of commission in Hoboken. The passengers from Boston on the Yale were all in the forward part of the boat when the collision occurred. The vessel itself was only slightly damaged. About eight feet of her stern rail was ripped off, but her hull was only scraped. She steamed into her berth after the collision.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, June 4.—With Old Sol doing fine work and everything pointing to the best game of the season, the Red Sox and Tigers faced each other in the third battle of the series.

Each team went into the fray with extra vim, for a victory and likewise a defeat means much just at this point of the scramble for the upper places in the American League race. Connie Mack's Athletics and the Highlanders are pushing the Tigers and Red Sox in a most determined manner and this hard pressing is causing Managers Lake and Jennings no little amount of worry.

It is an even break between the two teams so far as each has copped one game of the series and the rubber contest brought out the bugs in large clusters. The exhibition the Speed Boys gave in yesterday's contest of their ability to swipe bases against the very best basemen and catchers in the business made the fans eager for more of this sort of thing.

EXPOSITION PARK, Pittsburg, June 4.—If the Doves were ever going to take a Pirate scalp, the occasion was due to-day, and Mike Bowerman did not choose his words when he sent his men into action for the third battle with the Buccaneers who had already captured two prizes after some skilful manoeuvring on the diamond.

For being at the top of the erratic class local fans acknowledged that the Doves had no superiors, as the two contests already on the shelf went to prove. The Easterners had yesterday's game won and then let it slip through their fingers.

It was Bowerman's intention to use Tuckey at the start to chase the persistent hoodoo to the woods while the elongated Vic Willis was picked by Chief Clarke to hurl the pellet.

BITTEN BY HORSE HE WAS PETTING

Seven-year-old Eugene Brown of No. 224 West Fourth street, South Boston, is in the Carney Hospital in a critical condition as the result of being bitten by a horse he was petting as he was on his way home from school to-day. His jaw is badly lacerated, and the doctors say there is grave danger of blood poisoning. The boy's mother has reported the matter to the police of Station 6.

"THE MAN WHO STOLE THE EARTH"—Another installment of this enthralling story will appear in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

FRAUD CHARGE IN 'BUSINESS CHANCE' DEAL

James Cochrane of No. 10 Payson avenue, Dorchester, was the first witness to-day in the trial of the nine defendants in the "business chance" cases in the Superior Criminal Court. He said he never received a cent from the sale of a small variety store at No. 368 Tremont street, in April, 1905.

He declared that Melvin M. Ferguson, one of the defendants, offered him $250 for the store. They went to the office of Frank G. Holcomb, another of the defendants, and saw Charles Stuart, a third defendant. Cochrane accepted a mortgage on a block in Walpole for his store.

Cross examined, he admitted that, at the time of the agreement to sell, there was a mortgage of $100 on the store, but that he paid it off the following morning. Asked if he and Charles Stuart did not intend to "do" Ferguson, witness admitted "yes, but I went broke."

There were frequent tilts between the witness and counsel for the defendants. He insisted on explaining many of his answers and his frequent and explosive "noes" kept the court room in roars.

Annie Isabelle Cook testified that she was employed by Cochrane and that Ferguson came to look over the store. Mrs. Annie Cook, her mother, testified to going with Cochrane to see Charles Stuart.

JAILED A YEAR FOR CONCEALING ASSETS

Charles D. Johnson of Everett, who has run a chain of provision stores in Boston, Everett and Chelsea, was sentenced by Judge Dodge in the United States District Court to-day to one year in the Barnstable County Jail at Barnstable for concealing assets from his trustee in bankruptcy. This sentence is a confirmation of one imposed on Johnson a year ago. Johnson has fought the case hard, taking it twice up to the Circuit Court of Appeals. He filed a petition in bankruptcy in 1903. The trustee discovered he had kept back assets in the case.

'I'M SAVING MY $2 BILLS,' SAYS DEWEY

A red-hot political speech delivered by Judge Dewey when he was a candidate for mayor in 1905, in which he charged that the Republican nomination of Louis A. Frothingham was secured through "trickery and fraud," was read to-day in the famous $76,450,000 libel case of the former against five members of the Good Government Association.

Dewey insisted that all the speech be read. He listened to his ringing periods with a reminiscent smile. Edmund Billings, secretary of the G. G. A.'s, was on the stand under cross-examination by Lawyer McClennen of the defence.

"Shall I read all this speech?" asked McClennen looking toward Dewey.

"Why, yes, go ahead. It's a good thing. I like to hear it," replied Dewey.

"Why do you want to hear it again?" asked Judge Sherman, "you heard it once—you delivered it."

"Well, it's pretty good all the way through and the jury may want to hear it."

"If you want the jury to take its medicine, I won't object," remarked His Honor, and the speech was read through.

Dewey objected to the introduction in evidence of the petition signed by Boston men asking Frothingham to run for Mayor unless it was authenticated by Fred E. Bolton, then chairman of the Republican City Committee.

"Why can't you summon him into court?" asked Judge Sherman.

"I'll tell you just why," replied Dewey. "I'm hanging on to all the $2 bills I have

THAW LIBERTY PLEA REFUSED

NEW YORK, June 4.—Harry K. Thaw must stay in the Matteawan State Asylum for the criminal insane, according to a decision handed down this afternoon by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. Thaw appealed from the decision of Justice Mills refusing to grant him a jury trial to see whether he was insane. The decision to-day says he has no right to such a trial. Justice Gaynor alone dissented.

ANOTHE RTRIAL IS DENIED PATRICK

NEW YORK, June 4.—Albert T. Patrick was to-day denied a new trial for the murder of William Marsh Rice. The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a unanimous decision.

SOLONS URGE TO RUSH WORK

Speaker Joseph Walker of the House of Representatives to-day sent a letter to each member of the House, asking co-operation to prorogue the session before June 17. In the interim of less than two weeks the New Haven holding company bill, the question of allowing the Mellen road to hold the Berkshire trolleys and several other important matters would have to be decided.

The Speaker says in his letter:

"I do not wish to be understood as urging hasty or ill-considered action on any matter."

In the Senate to-day President Treadway in an address asked the members to co-operate for an early prorogation.

Representatives of the Republican State machine and lobbyists for the big public service corporations which have important measures before the Legislature also went among the legislators to-day, urging them to rush things along.

STOCKS SOAR IN WILD MARKET

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Stocks were wildly excited again in Wall Street to-day, with new high records in most of the leaders. Steel shares were heavily traded in, but the realizing sales in them were on such a scale that in the first half hour of trading they failed to improve the figures established yesterday.

Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, however, were sensational in their movements. Union Pacific sold ex. dividend 2½ per cent, and was dealt in at 92¾, making it the equivalent of 195¼, an advance of two points over night and within half a point of the highest price in its history.

Southern Pacific advanced 2½ points to the high record figure of 132¾.

St. Paul made a record of 155⅛. Missouri Pacific sold at 77¼. Erie at 36⅛ and Atchison at 113¼. The independent steel shares were actively traded in, Republic steel preferred leading them with an advance of 5 points over night, a new high record price of 104½. American Can preferred, the favorite specialty of the Rock Island group, was advanced 2⅛ points to a record of 86. New York Central was a laggard, rising only one point.

The Hill stocks continued strong and improved their gains of yesterday by more than a point. Trading was on a heavy scale throughout the list, with every promise early in the day of making a million and a half shares for the session.

London sent over new high figures for the leading international issues, with Union Pacific and Steel at the head. Trading in London was active throughout the list.

All railroads reporting earnings showed increases in gross. Steel companies say orders are being booked at record rates.

On the curb market transactions in the high class coppers and silver shares were at the best figures recently recorded, with the exception of the Heinze issues, which were under pressure. Cumberland Ely and Larose were two that made new high records for the movement.

NEW HOLDING BILL GOING TO LEGISLATURE

Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester, John W. Haigis of Montague and Michael J. Scully of Springfield, the dissenters from the favorable report of the Committee on Railroads on Governor Draper's holding company bill, to-day completed the draft of a measure which they will offer as a substitute when the Draper bill reaches the House.

Their bill prohibits the New Haven road or any other existing railroad corporation from financing the proposed holding company and prohibits the company from acquiring any other Boston & Maine stock than that now held by John L. Billard and other Connecticut friends of the New Haven.

The Holding Company bill was given its first reading in the Senate to-day and placed in the calendar for debate next Monday. Senator Harry P. Morse of Haverhill will have charge of it in the upper branch. It will probably reach the House late next week.

The Republican State machine has issued orders to all Republican legislators to vote for the bill and to oppose all amendments. A powerful lobby is also at work.

It developed to-day that the Railroads Committee plans to bring in a favorable report on the bill to allow the New Haven to hold the Berkshire trolleys.

MONKEYS KILLED BY ROOSEVELT

KIJABE, British East Africa, June 4.—The members of the Roosevelt party who arrived here on a special train and spent the night in camp near the railroad station, started out to-day to visit the local station of the Africa Inland Mission, an American organization. To-day Mr. Roosevelt spent some time shooting monkeys, particularly the colobus. R. J. Cunninghame, the manager of the expedition, and L. A. Tarlton, of Nairobi, stay at camp to-day completing the preparations to start on the trip into the Sotik country. To reach this territory the party will have to travel two days without meeting water.

Coming here Mr. Roosevelt and Major Mearns rode on the cowcatcher of the locomotive from Kikuyu, a distance of twenty-two miles. On the way a hyena that got on the rails was almost run down. Mr. Roosevelt was delighted with the beauty of the scenery, especially the rift valley, on the way up from Nairobi. All the porters of the expedition, who had preceded Mr. Roosevelt to this point, were lined up on the station platform and cheered Mr. Roosevelt when the train pulled in. The American missionaries were at the station to greet Mr. Roosevelt.

16,000 UNION MEN BACKING CLERKS' STRIKE

BROCKTON, June 4.—Sixteen thousand shoe workers, with hundreds of other organized workingmen, through the Central Labor Union of this city, to-day stand pledged to render their moral and financial assistance to the members of the clerks' union, now on strike here to retain the Wednesday afternoon closing agreement, which has been in force for five years and which the Merchants' Association wishes discontinued.

Fifty clerks are on strike against the order of the merchants' organization. Three of the largest stores are among the number affected. Withdrawal of patronage is threatened.

Three additional stores were deprived of their union cards to-day by the officials of the clerks union, and the interest taken in the situation locally was doubled by an informal announcement that non-union clerks were to be imported from Providence to take the places left vacant by the strikers.

The vote taken by the Central Labor Union may cause the Merchants' Association to withdraw its order, as a large number of its members have already conceded the point after a two-day strike, but the fear of a labor war prevails throughout the city to-day, and the situation is critical.

1,500 DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE

NEW YORK, June 4.—Two hundred families were driven from their tenement homes early to-day when fire started in the seven-story factory building extending from Nos. 48-50 Cannon street back to No. 288 Delancey street, which threatened every building in the neighborhood. Fully 1,500 persons were driven to the street.

There were fifty sweatshops in the Cannon-Delancey street building, and in very one of these shops was a night watchman. Chief Croker is not certain that all these watchers escaped, and to-day he ordered the men of truck company 18 to make a search of the ruins.

"Go from cellar to roof," ordered the fire chief. "If everybody got out of that building some of them went by flying machones."

When in obedience to orders truck 18's men began to search, the inside of the building was blistering hot and the smoke was almost suffocating. The building cannot be gone over until night, the firemen say.

LA FOLLETTE WEEPS OVER SENATE FIGHT

WASHINGTON, June 4.—When Senator Lafollette resumed his remarks on the tariff to-day, he offered an apology to Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire for having failed to be courteous to him yesterday. He became dramatic and during his speech wept. Touching upon the Penrose incident of last night, when the Pennsylvania Senator said in commenting upon Lafollette's absence, that he was only feigning illness, Lafollette replied that Penrose would be serving the country better by accounting for his own actions.

"No man could undertake," he exclaimed, dramatically, "to account for the whereabouts of the Pennsylvania Senator without transgressing the rules of the Senate."

Senator Penrose interrupted to call attention to a statement made in Lafollette's magazine that the State of Pennsylvania is $79,000,000 in debt and should go into the hands of receivers.

Penrose showed that the man quoted as making this statement did not exist, and that instead of being in debt his state has a balance to its credit of $11,000,000.

Lafollette explained that the statement had been taken from a Chicago daily newspaper and reprinted in his magazine and that editorial correction had since been made when the error was discovered. He explained at length his anti-corporation course as Governor of Wisconsin and his fight against the transportation companies. He had been bitterly assailed then, he said, and could not now be swerved from his course in the interests of what he believed to be right by a continuation of these attacks.

BOY ARRESTED AS BURGLAR IS LOST

Eleven-year-old Harold T. Lloyd of Somerville, charged jointly with Charles W. Bohen of the same age with a recent break at Parke Snow's department store in Davis square, has disappeared from home, according to his widowed mother's testimony in Somerville District Court to-day. Both lads were in court last week accused of breaking into the store and taking $12 in cash and $10 worth of goods. The cases were continued until to-day. Wednesday young Lloyd went out to play, and has not come back. Judge L. Roger Wentworth ordered Lloyd defaulted, and continued Bohen's case for a week.

AUTOISTS FINED $150 AT CHELSEA

Judge Bosson imposed $150 in fines on autoists in the Chelsea Court to-day. David F. Cobb of Manchester, William H. Emerson of Worcester, Henry Burbank of Swampscott, D. Adelbert Cutler of Malden, Peter T. Lahey of Milton and Charles M. Bryant of Quincy were fined $20 each for speeding. The case of Edward A. Porter, Bryant's chauffeur, was placed on file. Nathaniel F. Ayer of Boston was fined $10 for speeding. For having chains on the tires of their autos, Harry S. Connors and James A. Ferns of Boston were fined $10 each.

END SHOE STRIKE AT NEWBURYPORT

NEWBURYPORT, June 4.—After a strike of several months, the shoe cutters have returned to work at the C. A. Ellis plant under old conditions. Since the strike was started C. A. Ellis died, and negotiations for the transfer of the business culminated within a few days in a sale to the Gale Company of Boston, owning shoe shops in Haverhill, Exeter and elsewhere. It was announced that the business of the Ellis plant would be transferred to the Gale shops in Haverhill. This, it is said, had much to do with the decision of the strikers. It is believed that the Ellis plant will be occupied by a new shoe firm.

LIPTON READY TO SEEK CUP AGAIN

NEW YORK, June 4.—John W. McKay, president of the Mexican National Packing Company and an intimate friend of Sir Thomas Lipton, arrived in New York on the steamship Lusitania to-day and declared that Sir Thomas was ready to send a fourth Shamrock over in an effort to lift the America's cup.

"Sir Thomas feels that his fourth trial will be a success," said Mr. McKay. "The fourth boat, like the fourth leaf of a shamrock, ought to bring luck to the owner."

NEW BRITAIN MAN DROWNED IN SURF

ATLANTIC CITY, June 4.—William Parker Bonbright, a prominent young business man of New Britain, was drowned while bathing here to-day. He was swimming by the life lines when he suddenly sank. He was a Haverford College graduate, a member of several clubs and one of the firm of the New Britain Hardware Company.

YANKEE HORSES ALSO RAN

MANCHESTER, June 4.—Lord Howard De Walden's Cargill won the Manchester Cup, $15,000, to-day, with L. Robinson's Rush Cutter second and Washington Singer's Lischana third. August Belmont's Fair Play and Norman were among the thirteen others that failed to show.

WESTINGHOUSE AUTO BALKS; BRIDE WALKS

LENOX, June 4.—George Westinghouse, Jr., and his English bride, who are spending their honeymoon at the Westinghouse country estate here, were forced to walk twenty miles under a broiling sun after their automobile broke down in the wilderness. The Westinghouses left here in their automobile bound for October mountain, the Harry Payne Whitney estate, where they had planned to do a day of trout fishing. They made good time until they struck the back woods roads of the wilderness, which for the greater part covers October mountain. The going became rougher and rougher, until finally the auto gave out and left them stranded without an automobile garage or repair shop within twenty-five miles.

GRAFTERS ON ISLAND; TO SEW OVERALLS

Former Alderman George H. Battis, former President of the Common Council Leo F. McCullough and Attorney James T. Cassidy, all convicted of grafting from the city of Boston, were to-day taken to the House of Correction on Deer Island.

Battis must stay there for three years, McCullough for two and Cassidy for one year.

These three well-known men, whose trials and convictions all grew out of the revelations made by the Finance Commission, are to-day locked up in cells.

To-morrow they are all to be put at work sewing overalls and jumpers. They are to work in a room where there are two hundred convicts. They will operate sewing machines.

To-day they were all entered in the books of the institution. Then they were marched to the tailor shop, where they donned the regular clothing worn by inmates of the House of Correction. The clothes are not striped. They are a dull, almost indescribable color, ugly and dun in appearance.

Then the three men whose conviction caused such a sensation in the city were taken to the institution's barber shop where they were shorn of their locks.

That procedure finished, and looking for all the world much like the hundreds of other men prisoners on Deer Island, the trio were taken to their cells and the iron doors swung on them and the keys were turned.

Each man seemed to be nerved to the ordeal. From the time they were taken from the Charles street jail, where they spent the night after receiving their sentences from Judge Schofield, until they were finally landed in prison, they were impassive and almost stolid in demeanor.

The committee will even concede that short selling is a feature which cannot be eliminated without seriously disturbing the whole business system of the country.

FOGARTY GETS DARLING'S JOB

Francis M. Fogarty was to-day appointed clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of this district. He is only twenty-eight years old, and is doubtless the youngest clerk of a Federal court of this grade in the country. His salary will be $2,500 a year, with perquisites which will bring it up to $4,000 a year. Only a few days ago Mr. Fogarty was congratulated by friends on the arrival of his first baby, a girl, at his home, No. 70 Stratton street, Dorchester. He succeeds General Charles K. Darling, who leaves the office July 1 to become clerk of the United States Circuit Court.

Mr. Fogarty was General Darling's first assistant clerk. He was admitted to the bar last year. To-day's appointment was made by Judges Colt, Putnam and Lowell. There were several candidates and considerable influence was exerted.

Mr. Fogarty's old position is to be taken by Arthur I. Charron, an assistant clerk.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO ARCHBISHOP

The Boston Pilot, the official organ of the archdiocese of Boston, in an editorial upon the homecoming of Archbishop O'Connell, says:

The homecoming of the archbishop has aroused the widest interest among the people of the whole archdiocese. The celebration of the silver jubilee of his ordination, which occurs also at this time, gives an added interest to the occasion. It is the first time that he has been away from the archdiocese for any lengthy period since his accession to the episcopal throne of Boston, and there is a universal desire to feel itby in some striking way to the sense of appreciation which his people feel for the brilliant and fruitful architectonics which have marked the four years of his pontificate in Boston. * * *

His personality has been a mighty force in this place and all have felt its pleyer and impressiveness. He has opened up before the Catholics of the archdiocese new horizons and wider and more fruitful fields of endeavor. He has made them feel as never before the power and inspiration of the Church and the mighty mission which is before it. He has lifted them up to a higher plane of thought by his luminous expositions of Catholic truth and of the practical problems that call for settlement. Every Catholic of this place has felt the magic of his influence and of his commanding personality.

His home-coming from his ad limina visit to Rome will be the signal for a public expression of appreciation for him and for his work that has never been surpassed in the annals of the Church in this country.

EX-SENATOR WEDS JUDGE'S DAUGHTER

Ex-Senator Frank Rotherich of Jamaica Plain, and well known in Republican councils in this city, was married to Miss Dorothea C. Wright, daughter of Judge and Mrs. John Wright of Atlanta, Ga., by Rev. Allan Stockdale of the Union Church on Columbus avenue, on account of the recent death of Mr. Reiberich's father, a private ceremony was conducted.

Mr. and Mrs. Reiberich will live at the Adams House until the renovation of their residence in Parley Vale, Jamaica Plain, which they expect to be able to occupy the latter part of this month.

TAFTS INVITED TO VISIT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., June 4.—President and Mrs. Taft are in receipt of numerous invitations from members of the cottage colony to visit Newport the coming Summer. Among the prospective hostesses are Mrs. William G. Roelker, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and all Newport hopes that the invitations may be accepted. While the President would not feel obliged to attend monkey dances, he would find plenty of diversion in the links of the Newport Golf Club.

FARMERS CAN RULE, DECLARES WILSON

MONTREAL, June 4.—At a special convocation of the governors of McGill University at Macdonald College, the new school of agriculture, the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon James Wilson, the United States Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. James Earl Russell, dean of the Teachers' College of Columbia University, and several Canadians. In an address Secretary Wilson said: "Half the people under your flag and ours rule the soil for a livelihood. They are not the governing class in either country, while they hold the balance of power at the ballot box."

BOSTON MEN OF MAYO TO HONOR DAVITT

Under the auspices of the Mayo Men's Benevolent Club, a testimonial dinner in honor of Michael Davitt, renowned as the father of the Land League movement, will be held at No. 694 Washington street this day afternoon and evening. The speakers will include the Rev. James J. Maguire, S. J., of Boston College, and James H. Vahey. A quartet of professional soloists will render Thomas Davis's patriotic airs, among them being the "Memory Waltz." The committee in charge includes Joseph Thornton, Patrick F. Hastings, J. J. McNulty, J. J. McAndrew, Hugh Rafferty, M. J. Needham and Patrick H. Brogan.

OPERA JOB FOR SOCIETY MAN

Paul Jones Chute, the solo dancer, who gained additional fame a month ago by declaring that trousers were "a detestable invention of a pseudo civilization," and that knickerbockers were the only suitable nether garments for men, has been engaged by Miss Lois Fuller as the premier male dancer of the Boston Opera House. He has a three-year contract with Miss Fuller, who has charge of all dancing at the new opera house.

Miss Fuller is quoted as saying that Mr. Chute is one of the most graceful dancers she ever saw. He is noted in Boston, Newport and New York for his solo dancing at social functions. He has appeared often at smart society entertainments in this city.

Last month Mr. Chute in an interview about trousers said:

"I most certainly believe in knickerbockers as the coming garment for men. Knickerbockers are a logical form of dress. They are comfortable and always neat. They are more easily donned and they permit a greater freedom of movement. Everyone knows what an extremely uncomfortable thing long trousers are, with their binding and their threats of parting. Knickerbockers have no organ that must be kept in order. There is no bagging at the knees. They never fray around the edges.

FORCE WAR ON COTTON RATES

WASHINGTON, June 4.—There is a growing suspicion in the minds of some Senators who belong to the Aldrich organization that there is something wrong with the cotton goods schedule of the tariff bill. No section of the measure has been so vigorously attacked as this one, and the "progressives," who are headed by Senators Bulkeley and LaFollette, are beginning to make an impression, although it is not likely that they will be able to obtain any modifications. That the rates have been materially increased in the bill, and that even under the Dingley rates the manufacturers have been able to pay enormous dividends, is the contention of the opponents of the schedule.

Senator Aldrich has made reply that the rates have not been increased, but have simply been readjusted to prevent undervaluations made possible by a construction of the law by the Board of Appraisers. He has promised a full explanation, but has not made it. Senator Lodge's defence of the schedule failed to explain the advance in rates, but was a plea for protection to the industry because protection had always been extended.

AUERBACH AIDS IN GOULD CASE

NEW YORK, June 4.—It is hardly possible that the separation suit brought by Katherine Clemmons Gould against her husband, Howard Gould, will come to trial on Monday.

Supreme Court Justice Gildersleeve to-day signed an order naming Junius T. Auerbach of Boston as a commissioner to examine Dr. Martin D. Munn of that city as a witness in behalf of Mrs. Gould. Counsel were given until to-morrow to serve their questions and cross questions, then they will go to Boston and examine the witness before the commissioner. The examination will probably take the better part of two days, bringing the actual beginning of the trial up to Wednesday, unless something else intervenes in the meantime to further delay the trial.

WIDOW DEFACES HUSBAND'S GRAVE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 4.—Hostility against her husband is said to have prompted Mrs. Kate Richman to steal the flowers from his grave and use them for decorative purposes. She was arrested and when confronted with the accusation merely replied "That's no place for flowers."

The charge was made by her brother-in-law, Carl Ferguson, who said he planned the flowers Decoration Day and saw them on Mrs. Richman's front porch.

BIG ICEBERGS HURT SHIPPING

SYDNEY, N. S., June 4.—With the Straits of Belle Isle almost choked with icebergs and floating field ice, thus cutting off the short and direct route of the transatlantic steamers which during the Summer months ply an active trade between the ports of St. Lawrence and Liverpool, another chapter is added to the history of the ice blockade.

While in other years at this season the straits were free from ice, opening up a clear course for the steamers, this Spring the ice is disposing an inclination to hover in the vicinity of Anticosti, making it necessary for the vessels to take a route out of their way to encircle the southern coast of Newfoundland.

It is believed that the steamers will be obliged to follow the long route until the last of this month or the first of July.

From early June until November, Montreal and Quebec are the two largest shipping ports on the Atlantic seaboard, and the effect of the ice blockade in Belle Isle will be a serious handicap to commerce, as it will mean the loss of about a day on each trip.

French Birth Rate Gains.

PARIS—Official figures for 1908 are more reassuring and shows an excess of 40,441 births over the deaths. The total of deaths decreased 48,266 in 1908, while the births increased 18,067.

FEWER IDLE MEN IN STATE

Statistics from the State Bureau for the first quarter of 1909 show that out of a membership of 163,050 representing 777 unions, 11,397, or 11.42 per cent. were reported idle March 31, showing a more favorable state of employment than was observed December 31, when the percentage of idleness was 13.04, and a decidedly more favorable state than on March 31, 1908, when the percentage was 17.90. The state of employment March 31, 1909, more nearly corresponds to that on September 30, 1908, than to that of any other of the last five quarters.

The principal cause of idleness on March 31, was, as usual, lack of work of material. It is considered significant that the percentage idle on account of lack of work or material was 9.50 per cent., March 31, as compared with 10.08 per cent., December 31, and 16.18 per cent. March 31, 1908.

PAINFUL TREATMENT OF SCIATICA

Of the many forms which rheumatism takes, that which is popularly known as sciatic rheumatism probably tortures its victim more than any other. That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured this stubborn as well as painful trouble is a fact proved by the following statement, and no sufferer who reads this can afford to let anything stand in the way of trying this treatment.

The cure of Mr. George H. Owen, of No. 44 Lincoln Street, South Framingham, Mass., is convincing proof of the superiority of the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over the usual medical treatments for sciatica. Mr. Owen is an engineer with the Dennison Mfg. Co., where he has been employed for over 30 years. Of his cure, Mr. Owen says:

"Through overwork and a bad cold, which settled in my back, I was attacked by sciatica in my right leg several years ago. I was bent over with pain which was continually present. It grew so much worse that the doctor recommended a blistering plaster. Then my leg was lanced and the pain relieved by injection of morphine. After all this treatment for the sciatica I was left in a run-down condition and my doctor failed to build up my strength.

"My blood was in poor shape and I had no appetite. I was restless at night. There was a constant dull ache across my back. During my sickness I was often confined to my bed and lost in weight from 168 pounds to 118 pounds.

"I was in despair of ever getting better but fortunately Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended to me by some friends. The pills soon had my blood in good condition but, I took them steadily until I was fully restored to health. I am very grateful for the benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gave me and always recommend them."

If you are suffering from sciatica and the treatment you are taking is not relieving you, or if you are actually getting worse while taking other treatment, then do not delay but give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a thorough trial. The remedy that cures others will cure you.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Do You Believe in Love at First Sight?

Here Are Cash Prizes for Your Opinion

Do Rapid Fire Romances Lead to Marital Happiness and Home Content?

Do you believe in love at first sight? Is it a lasting affection? Does it usually lead to happy marriage? What do you think about it?

The BOSTON AMERICAN wants your views on this old but always live and never-settled problem and it will give $50 in cash and forty-seven other attractive prizes for the best fifty articles written by its readers with "love at first sight" as the subject.

"Love at first sight" is exemplified in "The Traveling Salesman," the interesting play now running at the Park Theatre, and the way the romance develops has inspired this contest. Everybody has had an unanticipated tussle with the little god at some time or another. Everybody has had some romantic experience of the kind and everybody has more or less strong and original views about it.

What Do You Think About It?

Do you believe in love at first sight? If so, why?

Does it lead to happy marriage? If so, what is the reason?

Is love at first sight a more lasting love than the affection inspired by lengthy courtship?

Are there more separations and divorces resulting from marriages following love at first sight than there are in cases where love came from longer association?

These questions and many others will instantly occur to you. They will recall incidents in your life and those of your friends. Perhaps you are beset by the problem at this moment. Perhaps your heart is beating a bit faster than usual because of some girl or some man you have barely met, but whom you think you love more dearly than any other your ever saw before.

FIFTY PRIZES FOR "LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT" CONTEST.

First................$25 in gold
Second................$15 in gold
Third................$10 in gold
Next ten articles............ Ten boxes for "The Traveling Salesman"
Next thirty-seven articles..... Seventy-four reserved seats for "The Traveling Salesman"

Rapid-Fire Romance.

In the second act of "The Traveling Salesman" there is such a rapid-fire romance. Bob Blake, the hero, who has never before been in love, has fallen head over heels in love with Beth Elliott, the heroine, the moment he saw her. "Say, do you believe in love at first sight?" he asks. "Yes," she replies, "my mother fell in love with father that way," to which Blake replies, "I'd have liked your mother." Then Beth declares they were married in two weeks' time. Whereupon Blake proposes and she says "yes."

Boston American Wants Your Ideas on the Subject—Send Them Along.

Now what do you think about it?

Make your article short. It must not exceed 150 words; shorter than that is better. Write on one side of the paper and address "Love at First Sight Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston."

Here Are the Prizes.

For the best article the BOSTON AMERICAN will pay $25 in gold; for the next best, $15, and for the third, $10. The writers of the ten next best articles will each receive a box for a performance of "The Traveling Salesman," with which they may entertain their friends. The writers of the next best thirty-seven articles will be awarded, each, two reserved seat tickets to "The Traveling Salesman." If you have a case of "love at first sight" yourself you may take the One Man or the One Girl in all the world with you. Perhaps a romance will grow out of that.

The list of winners will be published in the BOSTON AMERICAN, Sunday, June 13.

DEWEY EXPLAINS $76,450,000

just now—the other side may summon him."

Earlier in the day Billings shouldered the whole responsibility for the interviews given out by the G. G. A.'s and the circulars sent out, declaring the five defendants in the suit had no hand in the matter.

Dewey Explains $75,450,000.

Before the case was resumed Judge Dewey explained how he came to raise his damages so many times and his process of the arithmetical progression. He said:

"My original suit was for $50,000. Then I decided to raise the amount, and I simply placed a figure 4 in front, making the sum $450,000. Then I decided to raise the amount again, and I placed a figure 6 in front, and the sum stood $6,450,000. The thought came to me that I might just as well raise it again, and so I placed the figure 7 before the amount and it read $76,450,000. That is as far as I have gone, but I am liable to place a figure in front of this sum at any time. You know one's mind works queerly at times. That is about all the explanation I can give as to why I have boosted the damages in my suit."

Courtroom Is Crowded.

The courtroom was packed with people two minutes after the doors were opened. In the audience were the five defendants—Laurence Minot, Eliot N. Jones, John Mason Little, Nathaniel N. Thayer and George N. Nutter.

Billings took the witness stand to continue his testimony of yesterday. He was questioned by Dewey.

Q.—What is the method of sending out circulars and interviews used by the Good Government Association? A.—Well, we have a publication committee of five, and their duty is principally, as the name suggests, the preparing of literature and the sending out of circulars.

Q.—Who headed this committee in
Q.—Were you secretary in 1905. A.—I was.

Q.—And how much of the publicity matter did you give out in 1905? A.—To the best of my recollection, I sent out the most of it.

Q.—I want to ask you, Secretary Billings, if any of these defendants didn't know before the sending out of this letter charging me with untruthfulness and insincerity, that the letter was to be prepared and sent out? A.—To the best of my recollection the defendants had no knowledge of the letter being prepared, knew nothing about sending them out and I don't recall that I even talked it over with any of them.

Followed His Speeches.

Judge Dewey then read to the jury the letter in question, a part of which was as follows: "We again call upon Judge Dewey to retract his false statement as publicly as he made it."

Q.—Now, Mr. Billings, tell me what investigations were made by the defendants or by you prior to sending out that statement to the press? A.—We attempted to follow what you said before and after the primaries.

Q.—How did you obtain the information as to the nature of my speeches? A.—In part through reports in the press and also from a personal representative who attended your meetings.

Q.—Did you have a personal representative at my first speech in the Dudley Street Opera House? A.—Yes, and he made a report to me.

Q.—Did he take down a stenographic report of what I said? A.—I don't recall, but I believe that he took down part of what you said in shorthand?

Q.—How many of my speeches were taken by a personal representative of yours after the primaries? A.—I don't recall, but parts of some of them were taken.

Q.—Can you give the names of any stenographers who took them? A.—No.

Q.—Did the announcement of my candidacy sound to you like a joke?

Judge Sherman told the witness he needn't answer the question unless he wanted to. Addressing the court, Judge Dewey said that he thought the witness should answer the question, as he thought it material. Judge Sherman then excluded the question.

Q.—Up to the campaign of 1905, had I ever done you personally any harm. A.—No, sir.

Q.—Had I ever insulted you? A.—No.

Q.—Had I ever interferred with your earning a living? A.—No.

Q.—At that time did you know that I was a Congregationalist by faith? A.—No.

Q.—At that time did you know that I attended the St. James Episcopal Church in Roxbury? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any personal objection to me at that time? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any personal facts in your possession at that time which made you believe that I was unfit to be Mayor of Boston? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any personal reason at that time for trying to drive me out of my affiliations with the Episcopal Church? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Up to the beginning of the campaign of 1905, did you ever hear that I was untruthful or insincere? A.—No, sir.

Knew of No Untruths.

Q.—Up to that time did you ever hear that I was guilty of telling an untruth? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever hear up to this day, with the exception of the instances complained of in my declaration, that I ever made statements that were untrue? A.—No.

Q.—With the exception of the matter complained of in my declaration, did any of the defendants, to your knowledge, have any facts in their possession showing that I was untruthful or insincere? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Before these articles were sent out about me, were they submitted to counsel for the Good Government Association to pass on? A.—Not to my knowledge.

Q.—Was the question ever discussed that the statements sent out about me might be against the criminal or civil laws? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—Did you ever stop to think that the sending out of the matter named in the eighth count was an infringement on my personal liberty? A.—I did not consider it an infringement.

Q.—I did not ask that question. I asked you if you had stopped to think before you sent out the matter that it might be an infringement on my liberty? A.—I don't know as I did stop to think of it.

What the G. G. A. Means.

Q.—When was the Good Government Association formed? A.—In 1903.

Q.—The Chamber of Commerce had a good deal to do with the forming if that association, didn't it? A.—Well, yes. Its president was one of the prime movers in the organization of the assocaton.

Q.—You had other business bodies besides the Chamber of Commerce interested, didn't you? A.—We had the Merchants' Association, the Bar Association, the Real Estate Exchange, Fruit and Produce Exchange and two others.

Q.—But the Chamber of Commerce took great credit for the nomination of Frothingham, didn't it? A.—I can't say that it did.

Q.—Was Charles T. Gallagher a favorite candidate for the nomination for mayor of the G. G. A. in 1905? A.—He was considered.

Attorney McClennen at this point objected to the line of questioning as being irrelevant. He drew from Judge Dewey the remark: "I'm thinking just now of the old covenant in the Old Testament."

Judge Sherman, interrupting, said:

I guess that's not in my line and it isn't involved in this case. I can't let your line of questioning go on.

Judge Dewey: "Well your Honor, I can have my exceptions saved, can't I?"

Judge Sherman: "You can have exceptions to anything that I don't like."

Judge Dewey: "Well, that's the next best thing to getting my questions in, and I am profoundly grateful."

Bowing to the court, Judge Dewey then announced that his examination of Secretary Billings was concluded.

Attorney McClennen then began cross-examination of Secretary Billings.

Q.—When did you first learn htat Judge Dewey was to become a candidate for mayor? A.—I can't recall the date, but my impression is that it was not until I had seen his announcement in the newspapers.

Q.—How long had you known Judge Dewey prior to his call upon you at the Good Government Association office? A.—I had known him for years by reputation and through his public career, but I had no personal acquaintance with him.

Dewey Wants His Speech Read.

Q.—Did you ever have any personal feeling against Judge Dewey? A.—Not the slightest.

Q.—Did any members of the executive committee of your association, so far as you know, ever have any feeling against Judge Dewey? A.—Not the slightest.

Q.—When did you first learn of the speech delivered by Judge Dewey at Jamaica Plain, in which he charged the Good Government Association with having secured signatures to the Frothingham petition by trickery and fraud? A.—Judge Dewey delivered that speech on the 9th of November, 1905, and I learned of it next day.

Q.—What was your impression of the speech? A.—I believed that Judge Dewey had unjustly charged the Good Government Association with trickery and fraud and had unfairly and without reason attacked it.

Here Attorney CcClennen read the Jamaica Plain speech of Judge Dewey, reading from several Boston newspapers. After reading about half an hour Attorney McClennen turned to Judge Dewey and asked: "Shall I read the whole of this speech?"

Judge Dewey:

"Why, yes, go ahead; it's a good thing, I like to hear it."

Judge Sherman interrupting remarked:

"Well, you've hard it once, Judge, you delivered it. Why do you want to har t again, and especially since the reading of the speech has reached a point immaterial to the case?

Judge Dewey:

"That's a pretty good speech all through, and the jury may like to hear it."

Judge Sherman:

"Well, if you want the jury to take their medicine I won't object."

Attorney McClennen finished the speech. He then proceeded with the cross-examination of Secretary Billings:

Q.—At the time when Judge Dewey said in this speech that Frothingham was "a fake" and the other candidates "all sinners," had your association issued any pamphlet on the city campaign? A.—Not more than one.

Q.—That one was a circular sent out by the finance committee? A.—Yes.

Attorney McClennen then submitted in evidence this circular of the Good Government Association.

Q.—At any time did you issue a circular against Judge Dewey? A.—We never did.

LYNN CADETS HOLD PARADE

The Lynn High School battalion held its annual parade and field day to-day, with city officials, proud parents and admiring feminine friends as spectators.

The six companies of uniformed lads, 220 strong, under command of Colonel Frank H. Byrne of the English High senior class, assembled at the Classical High at 2 o'clock, marched through the principal streets and thence to Ocean Park for the manoeuvres. After a most creditable drill the boys were reviewed by the school principals and Mayor James A. Rich. Stiles's Eighth Regiment Band furnished music.

Every High School girl was there in her prettiest Summer frock and with banners and streamers of class colors to cheer and applaud the lads. The scene at Ocean Park, with the boys marching and with the grandstand a riot of gay colors, was inspiring. The field day was considered one of the best in the history of the battalion.

SEVEN IN AUTO TRAP PAY FINES

Seven automobilists were fined to-day by Judge Emery Grover in the Dedham District Court for overspeeding yesterday in Dedham and in Wellesley.

Louis A. Shaw of Cambridge, a young society man, member of the Dedham Polo Club, and engaged to be married to Miss Joanne C. Bird of Walpole, was fined $15 for overspeeding in Washington street, Dedham.

Alonzo Schafer of Providence and Harry F. Furbers of New York, each paid $15, while Walter B. Grant of Providence defaulted.

The autoists caught in the Wellesley traps who paid $15 each were Miss Margaret Young of Boston, Morris B. Carpenter of Wakefield, Walter A. Gibbs of Whitman and George W. Morris of Lynn. Gudman W. Henson of Manchester defaulted.

REAL HARVARD NIGHT AT THE POP CONCERTS

Three thousand persons crowded into Symphony Hall last night because it was "Harvard night." It was Harvard night sure enough, any one with half an eye or half an ear would have known that. The students and their friends began to gather about 8 o'clock, and it kept the extra force of ushers busy finding seats for all that came. Incandescent lights, every one of them in the traditional crimson, flashed "Harvard" from the organ pipes, and the applause which roared back told how this graceful decoration was apprecited.

Conductor Arthur Kautzenbach had prepared a special Harvard program, from the march, "Cruiser Harvard," the opening number, to closing song, "Fair Harvard."

More Help Put on to Count Heavy Tour Vote

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

All Contestants in Hard Battle for Success

FIRE away with your subscriptions to the great vacation tour contest, boys and girls!

An increased corps of workers is on duty to take care of the counting of the subscription votes and all the individual ballots; to take care of the heavy rush of anxious contestants in the race for the magnificent tour prizes.

There is no let-up now. Every one is working. Every one is plugging hard. The determined boy and girl pluggers are conducting vigorous house to house canvasses, conducting dances, musicales and entertainments. All are working in the effort to gather those valuable subscriptions which will help to put them nearer the top of the contest.

Doubles His Standing.

Roy A. Jefferson, of 2,785 Washington street, Roxbury, who a week ago had only a little over 5,000 votes, more than doubled on his standing and jumped over twenty notches. L. B. McManus of 318 Columbus avenue, Boston, came to time with over 13,000 votes and climbed about thirty notches. Gertrude Jacobs, who added over 3,000 to her total, jumped about twenty notches in the standing. Gladys Mason advanced nearer the top by over 6,000 and Agnes McIver, the little Cliftondale hustler, with a vault of over 10,000, made a leap which bids fair to put her in the coveted "Big 29."

WANTS A HUSTLER.

Around the World Editor:

Time is SHORT. Who wants to tour Europe free of all charge? Get out and hustle! The one who sends in the largest number of subscriptions and votes will be taken as an escort by me. Subscriptions are what count! Here is your opportunity. Anyone. Hustle! Hustle!! Hustle!!! ELSIE M. BROWN, 5 Maple street, Cliftondale, Mass.

Practically everyone of those who were in the twenty-nine prize positions, have added more or less to their standing. Among these are Annie T. Bernard, May Brody, George Cohen, Bernard S. O'Kane, Harold Cass, Roger W. Conway, John F. Corcoran and Anders Ericson.

Charlotte F. McGee, of 100 Hilbert street, Arlington, who a week ago held down eighteenth position among the girls, is planning a lawn party at Pine Grove, Arlington, on June 6th and expects a large turnout of her schoolmates and older friends to help her climb in the standing.

Big Scottish Dance.

Jessie E. Sutcliffe, of 3 Lauten place, South Boston, the Scotch candidate, will be tendered a grand testimonial dance on Friday evening, June 11th, at Clan-Na-Gael Hall, corner D street, and Broadway, South Boston. Miss Sutcliffe has a reputation as a dancer. At the testimonial dance she will give the Highland Fling, Sword dance, Sailors' Horn Pipe and an Irish jig. She is confident that the dance will result in bringing her far up in the list, particularly as she commands the support of the Scotch clans.

Three workers for vacation tour prizes

John F. Corcoran, who held down ninth position a week ago, will be the hero at a whist party and dance to be held on Wednesday, June 16th, at Columbus Club Hall, Pearl and Pleasant streets, Dorchester. An Oriental orchestra will be one of the features of the entertainment offered.

Miss Robina Atkins of Quincy was the heroine in a two-act drama given in Colonial Hall, Quincy, and as a result has improved her standing greatly. The piece was "The Two Little Rebels." Among those who took part were Misses Marie Lavery, Dorothy Lavery, Gertrude Allen, Dorothy Young, Gertrude MacDonald, Helen Croucher, Natalie Scott, Helen Ketchum, Edith Atkins and Elenor Jones. There was also fancy dancing by Miss Grace MacDonald and a reading by Frank MacKenna.

Have you tried your hand yet at one of these entertainments? What have you done outside of talking about advancing yourself in the standing? Do you really feel that you are doing yourself justice in this contest?

Subscriptions Easy to Get.

Paid-in-advance subscriptions are easy to get, if you will only try for them. All it needs is a little ambition, energy and determination. You can get them, if you will work for them. If you don't get them, it is simply because you are lacking in one of the qualifications just mentioned. Others are getting subscriptions. You won't admit that the others are greater hustlers than yourself. You won't admit that they are more energetic than you are.

If you don't average at least one subscription a day, you are not doing your part. Ten subscriptions a day are perfectly easy to get, if you will go after them. Others are getting more than that a day. Why not you?

ONWARD! ONWARD! That should be your motto, and the only way you can get onward in this contest, is by means of subscriptions and votes. Subscriptions form the better way of voting, but you must not overlook the voting coupons which appear every day on Page 2 of this and every edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

American Pays Expenses.

Do not forget that the BOSTON AMERICAN pays all your expenses, also all the expenses of your escort or chaperone on these tours.

Do not fail to impress upon those you approach, the tremendous educational value of these tours and the effect they will have on your future. Impress upon them that the tours will make little men and women of you; that they will broaden your scope in every way; that they will serve to put the finishing touches to your educations.

It does not fall to the lot of every boy and girl to make such tours, to spend such pleasant vacations, as the fortunate winners of these tours will have.

Remember that, while the four major prizes for the boys are tours around-the-world and the four major prizes for the girls are tours to Europe, there are fifty other prizes, 25 trips for boys and 25 trips for girls to New York, Washington and Niagara Falls. These AMERICAN sight-seeing trips are indeed rich consolation prizes. On these trips, the same as on the others, you will travel in the best style. You will see many of the places of historical and national interest which otherwise, probably, you would never get to see.

Try for them. They are, indeed, worth your while. Any boy or girl with any standing at all in the contest, can jump among the "Big 29" in the course of one or two days' work. See what you can accomplish to-day. Get busy.

DR. JORDAN IS CALLED LIAR

BRYN MAWR, Pa., June 4.—President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford University was interrupted in his address to graduates of Bryn Mawr by Professor Lucien Foulet, instructor in French literature, who cried out that the speaker lied, rushed from the platform and left the building. The outburst was the result of a reference to France as a decadent nation, which Foulet construed as an insult to his native country.

President Jordan was speaking on "War and Mankind," and was saying that the warlike nations of the past are the decadent nations of to-day. He had referred to the inscription once suggested for an epitaph to the effect that "Napoleon has filled hell with the elite of Europe," and added that the great strength of Europe has been lost through mortal combat.

"Spain, Italy and France show the effects of their blood-stained battlefields," declared the orator. "France, by her own confession, is a weak and decadent nation, and——"

From among the members of the faculty, seated on the platform, Professor Foulet arose. Raising his hands, as if in protest, he cried:

"It is not so; you lie."

President Foulet pushed his way through the group and in front of Dr. Jordan repeated his declaration. Then he passed out of the building.

Dr. Jordan stood aghast, and there was a decided flutter in the audience. The speaker remained silent, watching as Foulet left the auditorium.

"If there are no more interruptions I will continue," said Professor Jordan. There was intense silence until the speaker concluded his address.

"ROSE WHIST" TO-MORROW.

The annual "Rose Whist" at the Daly Industrial School to-morrow afternoon will close this successful series of parties given for the orphan girls of the school by the president of the Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. Richard A. Lynch. The season's flowers will be distributed as favors and many beautiful prizes have been donated for the whist. A meeting will be held at the school, Sunday, to complete arrangements for the garden party which will be held on the grounds Saturday, July 10.

SPRINGFIELD, June 4.—Commodore Charles H. Nutting of the Springfield Yacht Club narrowly escaped death when his gasoline launch took fire in the middle of the Connecticut River opposite Brightwood.

Nutting jumped into the river to avoid being burned to death and was so badly dazed it was with difficulty that he managed to keep afloat until rescued by Thomas Mortell.

PLEDGE $50,000 FOR UNIVERSITY FUND

On the first day of the movement started to raise $400,000 for the endowment of Boston University before July 1, 1910, two trustees gave $50,000. One subscribed $40,000 and the other $10,000. The names of the donors are kept secret. While no definite promises were received during the day, it is practically assured that other wealthy members of the board of trustees will follow the example set by the two who have subscribed.

CAR STRIKE IS SETTLED BY POLITICS

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—The car men's strike was formally settled to-day after an all-night conference in the private office of Mayor Reyburn. The settlement spread over the city like wildfire. The strike was officially declared off at 2 a. m., and there was great rejoicing. To-day the 5,600 strikers return to their old posts, and no further trouble is expected.

The fear of the Republican leaders that they would lose the coming primaries really settled the strike.

Peace was brought about largely through the efforts of Senator McNichol, the Republican leader of Philadelphia. Indeed his efforts have brought forth a cry of "politics," as he apparently took a stand opposed to that of Mayor Reyburn.

Senator McNichol began negotiations with the representatives of the car men and the Rapid Transit Company on Tuesday, and acted as intermediary between the two opposing forces.

It was practically due to his labors that the company consented to give assurances in writing to reinstate the old men and to recognize the union by taking up all grievances with a committee chosen by the men.

This assurance was given by President Parsons after midnight after a two-hours' conference in Director of Public Safety Clay's office in the City Hall. A meeting of the strikers was called at 11 o'clock at the Lippincott Building. There was not the slightest question that they would ratify the terms.

At a conference held during the night the strikers withdrew their demand for a wage increase of four cents to twenty-five cents an hour.

Under the agreement signed by the Rapid Transit Company officials they are to receive twenty-two cents an hour. The company conceded everything else.

In addition to the wage increase the strikers won the privilege of buying their uniforms in what is practically an open market. Before the strike they were compelled to buy them at one place.

Under the three-year agreement ratified at the conference they are allowed to buy them at any one of five places.

FORTY TRAPPED IN A TENEMENT FIRE

NEW YORK, June 4.—Lives of forty persons, many of whom were overcome by smoke and were rescued by firemen, were imperilled in a spectacular fire which illuminated the Williamsburg bridge and surrounding territory, causing all the residents to tumble out of bed and hurry to the streets early to-day. The fire started in the seven-story building at No. 288 Delancey street and Nos. 48 and 50 Cannon street.

QUARRY STRIKE OFF.

MILFORD, June 4.—A strike at the quarries of the Massachusetts Pink Granite Quarries Company of thirty quarry workers, which has been in progress for ten days, ended when the company accepted the workmen's demand for the discharge of Foreman Frank Hanson.

BURGLAR TRAPPED BY WOMAN

LOWELL, June 4.—Awakened from sleep before daylight to-day by a burglar in her bedroom, Mrs. J. Oliver Sartwell, wife of a physician, remained quiet until he left the room, trailed him down stairs, and when he entered the dining room closed the door and turned the key. Then she ran to the telephone and called the police. Before a squad of officers reached the house the burglar escaped through a window.

Every officer on the police force to-day is searching for the man. He is believed to be the same burglar who has terrorized the neighborhood for several months. The police declare he is insane. Several society women have been awakened to find him in their rooms. A number have been made ill from fright.

Until to-day, when Mrs. Sartwell followed him, the police have been unable to find anyone who could give even a meagre description of the man. Mrs. Sartwell, however, got a good look at him as he was passing down the stairs in her house and her description may result in his capture.

Thought Burglar Husband.

Mrs. Sartwell was but little affected by her adventure. Upon the arrival of the police she coolly told of how she had been awakened. At first she thought the burglar was her husband, who had been called out. She remained quiet and discovered that the man was searching bureau drawers and turning everything topsy-turvy. Then she made up her mind that he was a burglar. At first she wanted to scream, but feared the burglar might attack her. She waited until he had finished his search in her room, and when he tiptoed out, she arose and followed. The man made his way downstairs and direct to the dining room.

As soon as the burglar had passed out of sight, Mrs. Sartwell quickly closed the door and turned the key in the lock. Then she rushed to the telephone booth and called police headquarters. Her story over the telephone resulted in a hurried trip of several officers to the house.

Women Terrorized.

They surrounded the dining room, and then one knocked on the door. There was no answer, and unlocking the door the officer entered. A window thrown open and a curtain partly torn from its fastening showed how the burglar had escaped.

A general alarm for his capture was immediately sent out from police headquarters and special officers were detailed on the search.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN FOUND DROWNED

The decomposed body of a middle-aged man was found floating in the water at the State street docks to-day by the harbor police. The body is that of a man about 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 200 pounds. It was clothed in a black sack coat, with dark striped trousers and low-cut shoes. It was taken to the North Grove Street Morgue, where it awaits identification.

BEASTS IN PANIC AT PARK FIRE

Twenty keepers and park attendants stood with loaded rifles, shotguns and revolvers at the cages of the Norumbega Park zoo early today ready to shoot down the fear-crazed lions, leopards, bears and other beasts of prey which were dashing frantically at the bars of their cages during a fire which burned down the park theatre, only a short distance away from the zoo.

Pandemonium raged in the zoo while the fire was in progress. The animals, terrified to madness, roared, howled, shrieked, jabbered and squealed according to their natures. They raised such a piercing clamor that people were awakened in Weston, two miles away, and sat up in bed alarmed at the unearthly din. Probably there never was such a frightful concert of animal sounds heard before in Boston. All this time the big open-air theatre was burning fiercely. The red glare of the flames lit up the zoo and the surrounding park. The noise, flames and general tumult made the popular pleasure park seem like a reproduction in colors from Dante's Inferno.

Theatre Cost $20,000.

The theatre, the biggest open-air one in the country, seated over 3,000 people and cost $20,000. It was burned flat. Other damage to the extent of $5,000 more was done. All loss is insured to the Newton Street Railway Company, which owns the park.

The fire was discovered in one of the dressing rooms at 2 a. m. by Night Watchman Ferrick. The Newton fire department in ten minutes had twenty streams on the fire. The flames burned out all the woodwork in twenty minutes. The two steel supporting pillars by the stage buckled and the whole girder structure fell.

The Women's Cottage, fifty feet away, burned; also a small Summer house.

The zoo collection includes two lions, two leopards, three bears, three buffaloes, five elk, a herd of reindeer, several red deer, an educated ape, birds and smaller animals.

Ordered Out 200 Men.

The lions, leopards and bears hurled themselves against the cage bars again and again. Head-keeper Benson gave orders to shoot the first animal which broke loose.

General Manager Matthew C. Brush of the Newton Street Railway telephoned and ordered out 200 men. The New England Structural Steel Company employes played streams on the ruins. All day long the work of clearing went on, while materials were assembled for a new theatre.

1640 CRATES IN LAST LOBSTER SHIPMENT

The last shipment of lobsters from Yarmouth to Boston for the season was the biggest, for the Prince Arthur landed 1,640 crates at Long wharf. There were 230,000 pounds and more. This also holds the record for two seasons, for the biggest last year was 1,607 crates.

STRAW HAT COSTS LIFE.

Missing since Saturday night, when he was seen to climb down the ironwork of the West Boston bridge after his new straw hat, which had blown off into the water thirty feet below, the body of Edward McDonald, aged twenty-five, of No. 89 Hampshire street, Cambridge, was found by the police floating in the Charles River.

BOY GUILTY; STOLE PONY.

Sixteen-year-old James T. Furlong of Swampscott, adjudged guilty in the Lynn District Court of stealing a pony from Andrew Clements of Swampscott, was sentenced today to Concord Reformatory. An appeal was taken from the sentence, and Furlong was bailed out in $500 bonds.

Wife of Nobleman In New Marriage Mystery

Countess Bettini Moise of New York.

"THE JOUGLER OF SRODEL"—This delightful romance of the last of the Troubadours is concluded in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

MRS. HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTIE'S charming story of boy life, "Jamie—a Little Soldier," will appear in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

MYSTERY IN U. S. MOVE TO STOP WEDDING

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Social and diplomatic Washington circles are agog to-day over the mystery in the use of the secret machinery of the State Department to prevent a marriage abroad between an American heiress and a man of alleged title.

This interception of the United States Government of a foreign marriage is unprecedented.

The young woman who was about to take the step is a sister of Miss Frances A. Garwood "of New York and Washington." It was Miss Garwood who succeeded in getting the government to take action in the matter.

The bogus noble to whom Miss Garwood was about to be married is said to be an Austrian by birth, is at the head of a New York hospital, is a physician and surgeon of note and is said to have a wife living in New York.

The following cable dispatch was printed in the AMERICAN on April 17:

> Paris, April 16.—The engagement is announced of Miss Isabella Garwood, second daughter of the late Hamilton C. Garwood of New York, to Count Bettino Di Moise Padua.

Miss Garwood called at the State Department in company with the Rev. John B. Quinn, assistant rector of the fashionable Church of the Ascension of this city. Miss Garwood told Assistant Secretary

Made Appeal in Vain

Huntington Wilson that the wooer of her sister, who claimed a title, was sixty years old, twenty years older than the woman whose hand he sought.

This man, she said, had completely captivated her sister and all personal appeals had proven vain. It required some sort of official action to bring her sister to her sobed senses so that she could see matters in their true light.

Miss Garwood first applied to the police of Washington, asking them to communicate with the police abroad and stop the wedding. She appealed to them, she said, because she thought that the objections to the wedding were well within their province. The police refused to act, and then, accompanied by Father Quinn, she called at the State Department.

At that time the Miss Garwood who was abroad was supposed to be at the Hotel Cecil in London. The reasons advanced by Miss Frances Garwood why the State Department should aid her in stopping the wedding were so convincing that the secret code of the department was used to send a cable message to Ambassador Reid in London, giving him authority to warn Miss Garwood.

Reply came that Miss Garwood had left London and was in Paris at the Continental Hotel. The message that had been sent to Ambassador Reid was repeated to Ambassador White at Paris, just in time, so it is stated here, to prevent the marriage.

Concerning the identity of the bridegroom-to-be, with a title, good, bad or indifferent, there is still some mystery. At first it was reported that he was a bogus Italian nobleman. This was proved false to-day, on authority of the State Department, and the Italian Government plays no part in the extraordinary occurrence.

It is believed that the mistake about the man being an Italian subject arose from his name and association with eminent Italians in New York. It was said that he was a distinguished man and a cosmopolitan.

By a strange coincidence Dr. Count Bettini Di Moise is a quite well known figure in New York. His given name is John. He was married and his wife, the Countess Bettini Di Moise, was in the public eye when called before a magistrate on a claim made by a fashionable dressmaker, from whom she had purchased some gowns worth $225 each. The Countess claimed that the dresses were not satisfactory and they were returned.

Another coincidence is that Dr. Bettini Di Moise graduated from Padua, probably his home town, in 1876. The cable dispatch concerning the engagement of Miss Garwood might have been intended to indicate that the Count Bettini Di Moise, her fiance, was from Padua.

Bettini Di Moise was last in New York five years ago. He returned to Rome, then with his wife, an American woman, who was known here socially as the Countess Di Moise. She was a slim, handsome blonde. Friends said to-day that she parted from her husband in Rome and came to America with her boy, who is now a student in Columbia University. The next heard here of Di Moise was the announcement of his engagement to Miss Garwood.

THREE MEALS FOR TAFT NOW

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The President, to the delight of members of his cabinet, has returned to the luncheon habit. For some time before he entered the White House Mr. Taft contented himself in the middle of the day with an apple or two. His weight was increasing, and this abstinence was a part of a diet regimen adopted on the advice of a physician.

The President did not seem to mind, but the cabinet suffered. At the Tuesday and Friday meetings Mr. Taft, not feeling the promptings of appetite, never glanced at the clock. As a result, when the conference broke up it was a common sight to see half-famished heads of departments scurrying for their homes or the nearest restaurant.

The President has decided to eat three meals a day hereafter, because he finds that his daily golf game or horseback ride is doing for him what diet did before. The decision was reached on his recent trip to Gettysburg, when he lunched with his brother, Charles P. Taft, on their private car.

HELEN KELLER TO DEFENCE OF BACON

Helen Keller, the world-famed blind girl, in an interview to-day defends the book, "Some Acrostic Signatures of Francis Bacon," by W. S. Booth of Cambridge, that was recently bitterly attacked by Professor Leo Wiener of Harvard University.

Miss Keller says that with the "ten eyes" in her fingers she has traced in Braille the pages from the Shakespeare text literatim. Miss Keller says that she is surprised at critics who rush into print and attack Mr. Booth's book without having read it and obviously without having understood it.

4 STOWAWAYS RUSSIAN REDS

NEW YORK, June 4.—Held as prisoners on the Russian steamship Russia are four men whose case is agitating high official circles in both this country and Russia.

The men are Ivan Masiennikoff, Constantine Grueff, Ivan Worinkin and Feodor Kasinlroff. They were found stowed away on the ship soon after she had cleared from Libau. They were smuggled aboard, it is said, by a discharged engineer.

From Ellis Island comes the report that they are criminals of high consequence to Russian justice. One, it is declared, was implicated in a plot to assassinate the Czar, while the others are murderers. The Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, which has interested itself in the case, says that these charges mean simply that the men are political offenders like Jan Pouren, and that Russia should be thwarted in her efforts to punish them for what this country does not recognize as a crime, as she was in the Pouren affair and in the case of Rudovitz in Chicago. All that really is known in the case is that the men were fleeing Russia in fear of their lives when they sought refuge on the ship and that the news of their capture was deemed so important by the Russian consulate here that a representative met the ship when she arrived and immediately went into conference with the captain. The result was that the ship was held to be Russia extra-territory and the men Russian prisoners within Russian jurisdiction.

Usually the central library, Copley square, has closed at 8 o'clock p. m. during the period June 1 to October 1. This year the library will remain open until 10 o'clock p. m., including Sundays, until June 15, and the 10 o'clock closing hour will be resumed September 15.

AUTO HITS BOY IN "TAG" GAME

While darting across Blue Hill avenue to prevent being "It" in a game of tag, ten-year-old Charles J. McCarthy, Jr., was struck and seriously hurt by an auto owned and driven by H. L. Heimer of No. 498 Norfolk street. The boy is in the City Hospital to-day suffering from internal injuries. The surgeons say he probably will recover.

Young McCarthy was playing at the corner of Lauriat and Blue Hill avenues just as Heimer came down the grade from Mattapan. Heimer made ineffectual efforts to turn out for him. The police brought no action against Heimer.

The boy is the son of Charles J. McCarthy, Sr., of No. 1,230 Blue Hill avenue. The McCarthys moved out there only a fortnight ago from No. 96 Zeigler street, Roxbury.

REID KEEPS LONDON POST UNTIL 1910

WASHINGTON, June 4.—It is generally understood in diplomatic circles here that Whitelaw Reid will continue at his post as Ambassador to Great Britain for the next year, if not for the next two years.

As a result of inquiries Mr. Reid was informed unofficially, but none the less authoritatively, that his resignation would not be accepted until at least six months had passed. But this information was not entirely satisfactory. Other inquiries were made at the State Department through friendly but unofficial agencies, and then Mr. Reid was informed that he might make any engagements he saw fit, that his retention of his office as ambassador would involve until well into the second year of President Taft's administration, possibly longer.

CHILD COVERED WITH HIVES

Tormented Two Months—It Itched and Irritated and Scratching Made It Worse—Little Sufferer in Terrible Plight—Several Treatments of No Avail—But at Last the

DREADFUL DISEASE IS CURED BY CUTICURA

"My six year old daughter had the dreadful disease called hives for two months. She became affected by playing with children who had it, although we did not know it. By scratching she caused large sores which were irritating. Her body was a complete sore but it was worse on her arms and back. We employed a physician who left medicine but it did not help her and I tried several remedies but without avail. Seeing the Cuticura Remedies advertised, I thought I would try them. I gave her a hot bath daily with Cuticura Soap and anointed her body with Cuticura Ointment. The first treatment relieved the itching and in a short time the disease disappeared. I recommend the Cuticura Remedies for all skin diseases and give them my greatest praise. Mrs. Geo. L. Fridhoff, R. F. D. 1, Warren, Mich., June 30 and July 13, 1908."

Boy's Back Raw
From Shoulder to Shoulder. Scratched till Blood Ran. Cured by Cuticura.

"My son's back was raw from shoulder to shoulder and the width of your hand. I really did not think he ever would be cured. He would scratch until the blood would run and he was like a raw piece of meat. I used different kinds of things but each kind made it worse until I read of the Cuticura Remedies, and one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment cured him like magic. I would not be without it in the house and I have recommended it to all my friends. Mrs. J. D. Maxwell, 6th St., Woodside, Long Island, N. Y., May 21, 1908."

THINGS BREAK BADLY FOR OUR DOVES

PITTSBURG, June 4.—"Things are surely breaking badly for us," remarked Secretary John Dovey of the Boston Doves today. "It was downright tough luck for us to lose that 9 to 8 game after making six runs in the second inning. However, it looks very much as if we cannot beat Pittsburg. The fates were against us. In the last half of the fourth inning it became so dark that it was impossible for our fielders to see the balls hit towards them, but as soon as Pittsburg had made its six runs the clouds and smoke passed away and it lightened up."

Johnny Bates played Wagner's home run very poorly. It should have been good for but a single. Johnny tried to take the ball on the run, and it got past him. Even if he had made the catch, one run would have scored, and probably not more than that would have got in if he had played the ball safe. However, it is easy to pick flaws after a game is over, and especially with a losing team.

McCarthy says a real hoodoo is pursuing him. He has pitched good ball al season, but has not been able to win a game. He thought things were coming his way, but the Pirates got to him in the fourth and he was yanked off the slab.

President Dovey is looking up the dope on a number of promising young players now cavorting in the minors, and he may add one or two of them to his roster before the trip is over.

BRIGHTON TEAM IN FIELD.

The National A. C. of Brighton, composed of the fastest of eighteen-year-old players, has reorganized for the coming season and are rapidly filling their schedule with teams of that age for Saturday afternoons and all holidays. Last year they won eighteen out of twenty games played, and this year they started out by winning two games May 31. Managers wishing to arrange games should address Frank Tierney, No. 50 Wexford street, Brighton.

DOVEY TO HELP DECIDE GAME

CINCINNATI, June 4.—George B. Dovey, the Boston magnate, and President Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg are in Cincinnati to-day to attend the meeting of the National League board of directors. Dovey, with Murphy and Ebbetts, will decide Cincinnati's appeal from President Heydler's decision on the protested game of April 23, between the Pirates and the Reds at Exposition Park.

Dreyfuss is a member of the board, and so is Herrmann, but neither gets a vote, as both are interested parties.

The Doves will play an exhibition game on Sunday at Hamilton, Ohio, and then go to Cincinnati to open a series with the Reds.

M'MAHAN SOLD TO LYNN TEAM

The Lynn team secured a Red Sox pitcher to-day when Manager Billy Hamilton signed twirler McMahan, the Holy Cross youngster picked up last Spring and farmed to the Wilkesbarre team of the New York League.

McMahan was not quite heavy enough for Manager Lake to carry on his staff and he was transferred to the minor league. Lynn needs some pitchers badly and was glad to get such a promising young boxman.

He was sent down to Lynn yesterday by President Taylor to let the Lynn management look him over and arrangements were made to secure him immediately.

He will join Lynn at Worcester to-morrow and pitch against Jesse Burkett's team, when he is likely to get a big reception from his many Holy Cross friends.

MILFORD'S WIN IS THROWN OUT

WOONSOCKET, R. I., June 4.—The executive committee of the Woonsocket Mill Baseball League has forfeited the game played at Milford Monday forenoon between Milford and Berkeley to the latter club on the grounds that Tommy Gilroy, formerly of New Bedford, who twirled for Milford, was not eligible to play, the league rules placing a ban on players under contract with teams in organized baseball.

Gilroy is under suspension by Nashville of the Southern League. The Mill League refuses to buck organized baseball in any form, but does not bar men who have played league ball, either major or minor.

The standing of the league as the result of the committee's decision follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
[illegible]anville Company	3	1	.750
Berkeley	3	1	.750
Whitinsville	3	2	.600
Hecla of Uxbridge	2	3	.400

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

Tris Speaker made a star catch over in Philadelphia which reminded the fans of Jimmy McAleer in his palmiest days.

* * *

Ganley, once with Pittsburg then with Washington and now with the Athletics, is considered by Quaker fans a second Dave Fultz in covering ground in the outfield.

* * *

George Gibson is leading both leagues in fielding. The clever Pirate catcher has handled about 200 chances without a slip and he is not like the boy who is afraid to take chances, either.

* * *

Eddie Phelps is hitting the ball hard and also catching well. All that the ex-Pirate needed was to manifest a little aggressiveness and Bresnahan appears to have him worked up to the proper pitch of in'e est.

* * *

Ellis, who is holding down left field position for the Cardinals, looks like a good ball player. He hows good judgment at bat, picking out the ones that are over and he meets the ball nicely.

LOWELL CLUB OF N. E. LEAGUE ON THE MARKET

Alex Vanwart, known in baseball as Al Winn, owner of the Lowell baseball team of the New England League, is desirous of selling the club. Lowell rests in last position in the New England League standing and for the past year has been under the management of Winn.

Some time ago, Winn set the price on the team at $12,000, but it is not known what price he asks now. Fred Doe, the former New England League magnate, has made an offer for the team.

Besides Winn, Emily Vanwart of Boston, and Carl Vanwart of Newark, N. J., are stockholders.

WOLGAST TO BOX QUAKER.

Ad "Kid" Wolgast, the great Western featherweight, has been hooked up in Philadelphia. On Saturday night next he will meet Tommy Langdon, of Port Richmond, in the wind-up at the National. Wolgast is undoubtedly one of the hardest nuts in the featherweight list. Kid Beebe, who has taken part in over 400 ring contests, admits that the worst lacing that he ever received was at the hands of Wolgast, and as the Kid was never knocked down in a local ring to the writer's knowledge, it may be inferred from that that Wolgast must be some fighter. He went ten rounds with Abe the decision, it was thought that he got the worst of the fighting. Wolgast and Langdon will weigh in at 126 pounds at 6 o'clock.

Raynor H. Allen of the 1910 class has been elected captain of next year's Technology track team. Allen finished third in the high jump in the New England Intercollegiates and is the institute's best high jumper.

YOU RUN NO RISK HERE

If we had not been in the tailoring business for 36 years, there might possibly be an element of risk attached to giving us an order the first time.

But to have survived more than three decades, growing more and more successful each year, must necessarily indicate that Newman tailoring possesses merit out of the ordinary.

And we have grown—not by offering "cheap prices," but by making our prices as low as we could consistently, and give value.

At $20 we set a style pace our competitors find hard to follow at $30.

Mutt Decides to Quit and Go Back to Frisco, But Take a Look----By Bud Fisher

CROSS CALLS OFF BOUT WITH YOUNG CORBETT

By IGOE.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Leach Cross has called off his fight with Young Corbett, which was to have taken place at the Fairmont a week from to-day. Cross injured his hand on Young Erne, and rather than take a chance of using it to soon, he felt forced to call the match off. It is to be regretted. Both boys have been waiting for the chance to have it out, and Corbett especially has had his eye on the match. It would have been one of his biggest houses.

Corbett believes now that Cross is afraid of him and says so. But the truth of the matter is that Cross realizes the importance of the California chance. To fight Corbett at this time with a bad hand might end in disaster and end his California hopes. Cross will need two good hands for the little Denverite. Any lightweight in the country will. It is the wisest thing for Cross to do, even though the fans will be bitterly disappointed in not seeing the battle.

* * *

Corbett meets Sammy Smith at the Fairmont to-night. The boys have met before, and there is hardly a chance for a knockout. Smith is as sprightly as Jem Driscoll, and the wonder of it all is that he hasn't made a higher climb of it. He dropped out of the game when he was good, and now, like Corbett, thinks the present crop of lightweights far below the average. Jack Ladbury and Sonny Smith will fight a ten-round preliminary, and it should be a bummer.

RACES IN CALIFORNIA.

Wild Bell, 2:08¼, that Charles De Ryder did so well with in the East two years ago, will again, as last season, be raced on the Pacific coast this Summer. He trotted a public mile at Chico, Cal., last September in 2:05¼.

Packey McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, was matched to meet Phil Knight, the Kansas City fighter, for ten rounds at a show to be brought off in Kansas City on the night of June 11. Harry Gilmore, manager of McFarland, wanted a guarantee of $1,000 for his man, but the club officials offered Gilmore 50 per cent. of the entire receipts for Packey, and Gilmore accepted in a hurry.

A bout is expected to be clinched to-day between Jimmy Clabby of Milwaukee and Paddy Lavin of Buffalo, to be fought at Terre Haute, Ind., on June 7. If the men are matched they will battle ten rounds at 145 pounds, weigh in at 3 p. m. As both men have been fighting well for some time, they ought to furnish a fast and interesting contest.

Joe Sullivan, once widely known as a manager of fighters and who, after running scrape at the old Phoenix Club in Memphis, exploited "Wild Bill" Hanrahan, a hard-hitting New York middleweight, has invited his friends to celebrate with him the formal opening of a new place he has purchased in Chicago.

Jim Kendrick, the English bantamweight, who recently arrived in this country in search of bouts, has been secured by Jack McGuigan to meet Phil McGovern, the South Brooklyn bantamweight, for six rounds before the National A. C. on Saturday evening, June 12. Kendrick is a likely looking youngster, and as he is clever and a good puncher, he should give little Phillie a hard battle.

Maybe Joe Cannon has not gotten a mess of free advertising out of his fight with O'Brien; and maybe Jack could not have landed a fat purse if he had tucked the Speaker away—at least there would have been quite a few that would have chipped in for same—meaning those that have been put away on the K. O. route by the aforesaid Speaker's gavel.

"Young Corbett" is certain that Sammy Smith, the former Quaker City boxer, is going to give him plenty of trouble in their ten-round bout at the Fairmount A. C., New York, to-night. "I have fought Smith before," said Corbett last night, "and as he is one of those clever, shifty fellows, with stiff jab, I know I will have to go my fastest in order to get him. As I know Smith has been training faithfully for six weeks, I realize I am in for a hard battle."

James J. Jeffries is said to have confided to a Chicago friend before he left that city that he would be ready to fight about St. Patrick's Day, March 17, 1910, and that if he had his way about it his next battle would be in California. The statement included the assurance that he would be willing to meet Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion, providing the colored man were not beaten in the meantime.

WRESTLING AT NORWOOD.

Wrestling fans are interested in the match between Sam Anderson and Joe Hanson, which will be decided at Norwood on the night of June 10. It will be their third meeting, each having a win over the other. The bout will be held in the open air, with a specially arranged set of lights, which will give spectators a splendid view of the men in action. Prior to the main event Cyclone Burns will meet Harry Strong, a Western heavyweight, in a limited bout.

SHRUBB AFTER RECORD.

TORONTO, Ont., June 4.—Tom Sinnot, Alfred Shrubb's manager, announced last evening that the little Englishman would go after the world's twelve-mile record on Sunday evening at the Island. Shrubb says he feels confident of breaking this record, which has stood to the credit of Deerfoot for over a decade. Deerfoot's time was 1 hour 2 minutes 21½ seconds.

WING WILL DRIVE CAR IN GLIDDEN TOUR

By J. C. KERRISON.

Frank E. Wing will unquestionably be the only Boston driver to participate in the Glidden tour this year, he having already made an entry of two Marmon cars. One will be driven by a factory man, while Mr. Wing will drive his own car, entered from Boston. This will make his third Glidden, and if he goes through the coming event in the same manner that he did the two previous ones then he will be a most dangerous candidate for the ownership of the Glidden trophy, as in both previous tours he finished with clean scores. His endurance work has been of high order, he invariably bringing his car through on scheduled time with perfect scores. The destination of this year's tour has unquestionably operated somewhat against entries from Boston, but the eastern section of the country cannot very well object to the western route, inasmuch as the great majority of the Glidden tours in the past have been held in this section.

Chairman A. P. Underhill, of the automobile committee of the M. I. T. reunion, has done famous work in securing the use of motor vehicles in conjunction with the outings. Already he has been assured the use of something like 200 cars all owned by M. I. T. graduates, and it can be taken for granted that the automobile day will prove one of the big things in the reunion of the men who sought learning at Tech.

Mr. E. P. Blake, who was severely injured in an automobile accident while on his way to the New Haven hill climb some eight or ten days ago, is out and about again, and is recovering as rapidly as can be expected from the injuries received. Mr. Blake manages to get down to his office occasionally, being forced to resort to the use of crutches for locomotion. Mr. Blake is beginning to feel that he will never be fatally injured in a motor car accident, although he yearns not for future experience in that direction.

* * *

The five cars now doing battle in the ocean to ocean race left Buffalo at 6 o'clock this morning bound for Toledo, some 286 miles away, which will make the longest distance for one day's run during the trip to St. Louis. The cars are all in good condition and seem capable of going indefinitely without any great difficulty. Frank Kulick, in the Ford, by right of priority, leads the van each day, with the second Ford well up and the Shawmut riding in her rightful position, third place. This is the order in which they check in at each night's control and check out the next morning, although it is not the order in which they must necessarily drive between controls, the leadership changing constantly. Among the competitors the prevailing idea is that the contest will go to either Kulick with the Ford or Pettingill with the Shawmut, these two cars showing to particular advantage and being on scheduled time each day, whereas the others have at time lost some few minutes, only, however, to regain the same the next day. The schedule up to St. Louis is well within the speed regulations, and readily permits of the regaining of time lost. The Boston car is doing admirably well. The real work will come in the dash from St. Louis to Seattle.

MARATHON AT SWAMPSCOTT

Swampscott will hold a ten-mile handicap road race on July 5, under the sanction of the New England A. A. U. Prizes will consist of ten silver trophy cups. Entries close on June 28 with Messrs. Frank Homan and H. H. Buxton, care of the Lynn Y. M. C. A., Tremont and Market streets, Lynn.

Marathon and came in thirty-fourth.

One Love in the World That Never Fails

THE SONG OF A NEST

I PRAY you hear my song of a nest, for it is not long.
You will never light, on a Summer quest the bushes among—
Will never light on a prouder litter,
A fairer nestful, nor ever know
A softer sound than their tender twitter
That wind-like did come and go,
That wind-like did come and go.

I, too, once had a nest of my own. Ah, happy, happy I!
Right dearly I loved them, but when they had grown,
They spread out their wings to fly.
Ah, one by one they flew away,
Flew far up to the heavenly blue,
To the other country, the better day;
And I wish I were going too,
And I wish I were going too.
—JEAN INGELOW.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IN the ivy just outside my window a robin is nesting. Hour after hour she sits there, and when I look at her she cocks her saucy head on one side and gazes at me with her bright eyes as though she would say: "Aha! You may think this very tiresome work, but just you wait and see the five wonderful birdlings that will fill this nest in a week or so.

"And when the wee birdies peck their way out of the blue eggs they will open their mouths wide and clamor all the live-long day for food. The little mother will work every minute of the day, and she'll feed them and teach them to fly; and then—well, then they'll fly away and forget that they ever had a red-throated, brown-speckled mother, who took care of them and taught them all that they knew."

Some Careless, Some Ashamed

That is very much the way with some human beings—they greedily take all the care and devotion which a loving mother can lavish upon them, and then off they go without a sigh or a backward glance for the one who has given her love and strength, and would willingly give her life for them.

There are many sons and daughters who are merely careless, they grow so absorbed in their own interests that they push the old people aside. They say, "Oh, mother and father are too old to have any opinions and desires; they are old-fashioned. As long as they have a home that is all that they need."

Just suppose in bygone days that mother and father had felt that way about you, Mme. Fashion Plate, or about you, Mr. Success! Where would you have been to-day?

Mother Love Always Waiting

I wonder if the average young man knows how very tender he should be toward his mother when he is about to be married.

No matter how pleased she is with his choice, she cannot help feeling just a wee bit sad and jealous. She knows that she is no longer the first woman in the world to her boy. And so she needs a little extra petting, and it would be sweet to hear him say: "You are the most perfect mother that ever lived, and not even my love for my wife can lessen my love for you. It is a different kind of love, that's all."

I have no patience with the young wife who is jealous of her husband's mother. She should have sense to realize that the better the son, the better the husband, and the mother who bore him should always hold her own special place in her son's heart.

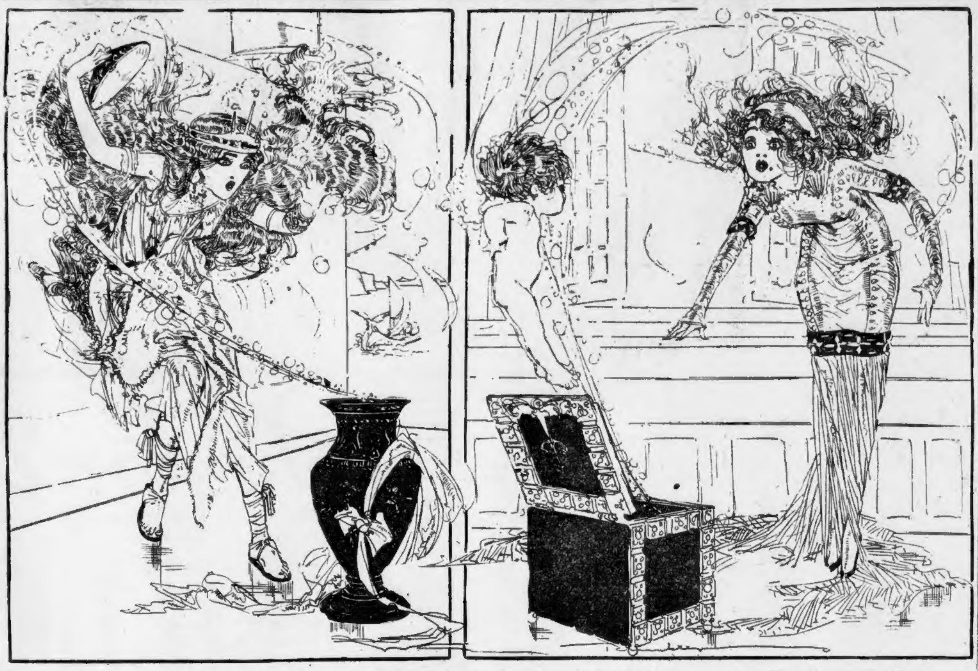

All children should make an effort to go back to the home nest once in a while. The most faithful, loving hearts in the world are waiting there with a warm welcome, no matter how far you wander. Remember that!

As long as your mother lives there is one place where you may rest your weary head and heart; one never failing, perfect love that is yours.

Do you think you can afford to neglect or forget it?

The Story of Pandora Up to Date

By Nell Brinkley

As the first Pandora lost all her good gifts except Hope—So, when the Pandora of to-day tries to pick Love to pieces he comes out in bubbles and bursts into thin air

THIS is the story of Pandora. In the time before Man was created, a huge race of towering Earth-men lived in the world, called Titans, and Prometheus and his brother, Epimetheus, were two of them.

And the High Gods gave to them the task of making Man upon the earth. And when the two of them had given to the four-footed brothers and the upright white-bodied man all their store of gifts—of strength and swiftness and courage and intelligence—Prometheus took wing to the Sun and lighted his torch at the wheels of his chariot and brought back Fire to Man as his finest gift to him.

And then Jupiter, from his starred, heaven-canopied ivory throne, watching it all, gathered the white Gods around him, and they made a Woman. They took all the wonders of the heavens around them and on the earth below and made this one woman—the quiver of water and its depth for her eyes; ripe corn and faery gold dust for her hair, the Spring aspen, with its shivering leaves swaying in the wind for the silver and slimness of her body; sprays of white blossoms for her arms and hands; the tender, fading pink of the sea shell for her ears; the leap of the spray and its fleeing for her laughter and weeping; the mystery of the sea and of the granite hills for her heart; wandering fire for her soul; a drowsy poppy for her mouth; stars for her forehead; the earth's alabaster and the grace of a bird on the wing for her feet; Spring clouds, and Autumn sunshine, and Summer riot, and Winter darkness and snow for the moods of her.

And then they clothed her in light and lit the fire in her soul, so that it shone through her body.

And after that they each gave her some good gift—beauty and winsomeness and tenderness, and singing—all the good gifts, and they packed them in a jar, told her not to unscrew the lid and try to look upon them, tucked her jar under her arm and sent her down to Epimetheus, the last crowning blessing to man.

Some say it was to pester him; some say to bless him. But anyway, even if Jupiter was in good faith, I bet, knowing all the things he had put into her, that he laughed up his sleeve and knew that as long as the world lasted she'd keep man busy.

Well, anyway, Pandora's pussycat quality got the best of her, and one day she unscrewed the lid of her jar to get a little "peek" at her blessings and how they looked—and they all sailed out and got away.

And when she put her stricken face over the silent mouth of the jar, only Hope lay at the bottom.

That is the old story of Pandora. Her dust has grown into a thousand roses and been blown into the sea in the dust of their petals again. But she was the first woman, and the rest of them have followed after and are like her—Pandoras.

The gods give her the same gifts of good things—beauty and winsomeness, and tenderness, and grace, and singing, and sagacity—all the good gifts—and the marvel of frail-lived, opal-souled Love, besides.

And they put all these, and Love, in a box to keep with her, in a box that is the secret around—the lock that is turned upon—all those frail springs of life that cannot stand the light.

God put the vastness of an impenetrable veil between them and us, so we may not be blinded by the sight of them. And yet he gave them into our hands close enough that we hug them to our very heart roots!

But that is not enough for Pandora. And Pandora is most times the Clever Woman, the one that ought to know better, the one that does know these things are too fragile for the light; that they die so easily; that they were not meant for her to handle with her fingers; that she cannot know their essence and the stuff they are made of.

But she tries. And so she tiptoes and fumbles at the lock on her blessings, and she heaves up the lid and tries to pick Love to pieces; to hold him against the light; to see his eyes and the inside of his heart. And he comes out in bubbles and bursts into thin air!

Don't worry about the great Why. Don't try to unravel dreams. For all your blessings—your good gifts—will go like bubbles—your beauty, your charity, your tenderness, your patience, your courage, and almost your Hope; and, worst of all, the Love that some one has for you—when you try to take his heart out, Pandora.

NELL BRINKLEY.

Love Does Not Thrive on Luxury

By DOROTHY DIX

THE other day the newspapers told a little story that illustrates the weakness of human nature so completely that it is worth repeating here.

In this city there lived a young couple who were happy, devoted to each other, and rich. Through some mishap the man lost his fortune and came home in despair to his wife. Being a good and sensible woman, instead of reproaching him for his bad management, repining at her fate, she put her arms about him and said:

"Never mind, Charlie, you can get a job and I can cook."

And she did. She turned off her servants, went to live in an humble little flat, and did her own work, and despite their poverty the couple lived in devotion to each other, and peace and happiness.

After two or three years of this simple life, however, the wheel of fortune again turned for the young couple, and they inherited riches, but instead of being a blessing they proved a misfortune, for the husband fell into evil ways, was untrue to the little wife who had stood so nobly by him in his evil days, and the story ended in the divorce court.

The question thus suggested, of whether poverty or riches makes for connubial happiness is an interesting one.

Undoubtedly bitter, biting poverty is a hard test for love to stand. In its essence even love must be material. When you are hungry you are more stomach than heart.

Great Wealth—Little Love

But on the other hand love can be smothered to death by too much luxury, and our common observations, as well as the records of the divorce courts, go to show that love and married happiness are among the luxuries that few millionaires have money to buy.

There are reasons why the possession of great wealth should tend to separate people who are married instead of drawing them together.

The greatest, in this country, is because of the fact that the American man who achieves a fortune spends the first part of his life in making it, and the balance in taking care of it. He lives in a world apart from his wife, whose interests she does not share, and whose language she does not speak. He gets up early and stays out late, and when he is at home he is generally too nervous and tired to talk.

Money brings temptations to the rich man that the poor man never knows.

Rich Are Self-Indulgent

Statistics show that the ratio of divorce is much greater in rich and fashionable society than among the poor. Yet there is doubtless just as much incompatibility of temper and uncongeniality of taste in green grocery circles as there is in banking circles.

Furthermore, the habit of self-indulgence is strong upon the rich, and the man and woman who are not used to doing without anything they want are pretty apt not to deny themselves a forbidden flirtation.

The wisest prayer that was ever offered to Heaven was when the Psalmist exclaimed: "Give me neither poverty nor riches," and this petition might well be incorporated in the prayers of the marriage service. Undoubtedly, the happiest couples are those where there is neither the wolf nor the automobile at the door.

The Failures of Idealism

No "ism" or "ology" is a success unless it gives practical results

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

LET me tell you here a great and vital truth which has been driven home to me time and time again during the past ten years: Idealism is never practical until it can be used in our daily lives; until it gives us better shoes, better clothes, better homes and larger salaries.

And further, no matter how great, how noble an institution may be, or how much good it may do for humanity, if that institution is not self-sustaining it cannot continue to exist. This is an invariable, unfailing law of Nature.—CHRISTIAN LARSON.

THIS is common-sense truth; and let all idealists take it home and ponder on it.

Religion is of no use or value unless it makes people better citizens, better employers, better workmen and women, better masters and mistresses, and better servants.

The world wants practical Christianity; and unless the churches turn out such spiritual graduates, they will be obliged to close their doors and give way to the great church of Brotherhood and Humanitarianism.

Love is of no value unless it makes the giver and the receiver happier and better.

Love which robs men of their wives, wives of their husbands and both men and women of their highest ideals of right living, will never make happiness anywhere.

Love which makes men and women demons of jealousy and monuments of selfishness is of no value in the world.

Love which walks hand in hand with suspicion, and which makes a bosom friend of jealousy, and whose chief expression is exaction, cannot be a producer of happiness in any household.

Love must be tolerant, patient, trusting and cheerful; it must cast joy and light and radiance in its path; it must cause the latchkey to turn eagerly in the lock and the door to swing joyfully on its hinges, certain of the cheerful welcome sure to be waiting within.

Love must cause feet to go slowly forth from its presence and to speed back again.

Love must represent the orderly home, the well spread table, the restful couch, the happy circle.

The man whose home-coming is dreaded by wife or children, the wife whose presence gives depression to husband or children, is incapable of understanding the word love.

Love, like religion, must be practical to merit its name.

Still I Sit and Think of Thee

By WILFRED FUNK

THE sunset steals its glory from the rose,
Then fades and dies; the weeds grow wondrous deep.
Like some sweet maiden's breath, the south wind blows
And gently stirs the flowers that nod in sleep;
Hushed and low,
Soft, soft and low,
It whispers so mysteriously—
And still I sit and think of thee.

I THINK no night was ever quite so clear,
So filled with light, so silent and so still—
So strangely still—I fancy I can hear
The notes of shepherd's pipes above the hill;
And by their grace
And charm thy face
Steals through the gathering dusk to me—
And still I sit and think of thee.

THESE quiet hills content a weary mind,
The fragrant meadows fill a heart with ease;
And whispered messages come down the wind,
And whispered answers stir among the trees,
While soft and fair
And light as air
Thy presence hovers over me—
And still I sit and think of thee.

Keep It Before the People

(From the Student and Schoolmaster of July, 1870.)

KEEP it before the people!
That earth was made for man!
That flowers were strown
And fruits were grown
To bless and never to ban.
That sun and rain
And corn and grain
Are yours and mine, my brother!
Free gifts from Heaven,
And freely given
To one as well as another!

Keep it before the people!
That man is the image of God!
His limbs and soul
Ye may not control
With shackle, or shame, or rod!
We may not be sold
For silver or gold,
Neither you, nor I, my brother!
For freedom was given
By God from Heaven
To one as well as another!

Keep it before the people!
That famine and crime and woe
Forever abide
Still side by side
With luxury's dazzling show!
That Lazarus crawls
From Dives' halls,
And starves at his gate, my brother!
Yet life was given
By God from Heaven
To one as well as another!

Keep it before the people!
That the poor man claims his meed—
The right of soil
And the right of toil,
From spur and bridle freed,
The right to bear
And the right to share
With you and me, my brother!
Whatever is given
By God from Heaven
To one as well as another!

Wood for Putty

A REFINEMENT in yacht construction, introduced last year by Fife in the construction of Shamrock, consists in the substitution of a thin slip of wood, known as a "slip feather," for putty, in stopping the seams after they have been caulked. The "feather" is covered with a very tenacious glue, driven hard home into the seams and left to dry. After the sides are planed off a remarkably smooth surface is obtained, the skin of the vessel being to all intents and purposes in one piece. This method has the further advantage that there is no caulking to work out when the vessel is being heavily strained.—Scientific American.

Perhaps—You'd Give 'Em a Vote

By CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT

PERHAPS, if you paused to think that the laws under which you live, and which control the whole environment of your life, are the direct or the indirect results of the averaged opinions which are put into the ballot box, you would incline to study the questions which pertain to the right of voting.

PERHAPS, if you realized that law guarantees, or restricts, your own personal liberty; protects, or jeopardizes, your health, your home, your happiness; regulates the food you eat, the clothes you wear, the books you read, the amusements you enjoy—in fact, permits or prohibits your every act, you would feel a serious obligation to inquire into the nature of such authority over you.

PERHAPS, then, if you would turn to the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1907 and would learn that 20,981 more girls than boys were graduated from our high schools that year, and that there are more young men of voting age unable to read their ballots than young women, and also that only an insignificant per cent. of crime is committed by women, and then by consulting your own observations and taking note that only a slight minority of the immoralities known to you have been perpetrated by women, you would recognize in woman suffrage added intelligence and morality to the voting forces.

PERHAPS, if you knew that the booksellers of Denver reported that they had sold more books on civil government and political economy in six months after women were enfranchised than in ten years before, you would be convinced that women appreciate the responsibility of voting, and prepare themselves to "administer the sacrament of citizenship" intelligently.

PERHAPS, if you realized the full truth that women are not disfranchised because "women do not want to vote;" because good men fear the influence of bad women on politics, or bad politics on good women," as is commonly reported; but because bad men fear the influence of good women on bad politics, and fear the influence of good politics over the affairs of bad men, you would be ready to join the Woman Suffrage Association. Why not?

THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Sir John Cotswold, member of an old English family, and once owner of estates of enormous value in Kensington, London, has been reduced to comparative poverty through his own extravagance and lack of business experience. He is a peppery, irascible old gentleman, abnormally proud, and has developed a rancorous hatred for the Jewish race, and particularly for Sir Isaac Jacobson, a newly made knight and Member of Parliament.

Sir Isaac was the son of a poor chair maker, one of the tenants on the Cotswold estate. He was ambitious and able, and became very wealthy. His son, Adrian, and his daughter, Esther, grew up as playmates of Sir John's children, Cecil and Ulrica. Not only were the children fond of each other, but Lady Margaret Cotswold was fond of the Jacobson children.

While Sir Isaac is broad-minded and tolerant, and has no antipathy toward Gentiles, Sir John's rabid prejudice against his race piques his pride and keeps him aloof from any intimacy with the Jacobson family.

Upon Adrian's graduation from Oxford with high honors, and after Cecil had won honors in grand opera, for which he had been fitted by the sacrifice and labor of his mother and sister and the secret financial aid of Sir Isaac, the two young men find themselves deeply in love each with the other's sister.

Cecil, through Lewis, an agent, receives an offer to sing in grand opera in New York for Oscar Hammerstein, at a salary that would put the Cotswolds in affluence, but Sir John opposes even this. Sir John writes a letter to the Times on "The Majesty of Birth" that is a direct offence to the Jewish race, but though urged by Lady Rebecca to eject the Cotswolds, who are now his tenants and behind in their rent, Sir Isaac refuses to take notice of the letter further than to say that in the main he approves of it.

Lady Rebecca is trying to force on her daughter, Esther, the attentions of Captain Trevor, a former suitor of Ulrica, who had dropped the latter when the Cotswolds became impoverished, but Esther will have none of him.

Adrian tells his father of his love for Ulrica and his intent to marry her if she will accept him, though his father tells him it will be a great sorrow to him, not because he has any feeling against the Gentiles, but because Ulrica's father hates him so bitterly.

Adrian and Esther confide in each other, and each is in sympathy with the other's love. Unknown to them, their father, Sir Isaac, has sent Cecil a banknote for one hundred pounds for singing at a reception the Jacobsons are to give. While Adrian and Esther are talking, Ulrica comes in and tells them her father has opened Sir Isaac's letter and is so incensed at money being sent Cecil that he has set out to call upon and insult Sir Isaac. Cecil also arrives to take tea with the younger Jacobsons, and tells Ulrica he hopes his father has changed his mind about calling.

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued)

The Love Plot

"HE'LL call," she said, with conviction. "He's just walking around, trying to make up his mind what to say."

"Very well, then, with your permission, we'll wait here until he does come," Cecil said to Esther. "We mustn't have any nonsense like that. It's childish, isn't it?"

"I think it would be a great pity," Esther concurred.

It didn't take the four young people long to dismiss all thought of impending trouble and think of their own immediate affairs.

Adrian was painfully conscious of the presence of his merry little sister and Cecil, and he had a tremendous amount that he wanted to say to Ulrica. He went back of the couch and in a whisper suggested that they leave Cecil and Esther alone.

"Why?" Ulrica asked demurely.

"Oh, because I've so much to tell you, and I can't tell it here with Esther listening and ready to burst out laughing at any moment."

Esther's silvery laughter, as she looked at her brother, came at that moment to confirm his declaration and Ulrica arose.

"It's very hard on children when parents quarrel, isn't it?" was all she could find to say.

"Very," Cecil answered heartily. "That's why I rushed away in the middle of a rehearsal. I know my father so well. He's the best in the world, but a little hot-headed. I don't want the breach between the families to be widened."

He looked at her as she sat demurely gazing at the carpet, and impulsively went over to her, with his arms extended.

"My dear, dear Esther," he said, but she slipped away from him and ran to the couch.

"Be careful," she cried, warningly. "If my father should come!"

"All the better," Cecil asserted, boldly. "Now, Esther, sit down and listen."

Cecil Tells of His Love.

He took a seat beside her on the couch and managed to possess himself of one of her little hands.

"I loved you when I was twelve, didn't I?" She nodded, with averted head, and he went on: "You remember, when we played at getting married and walked up to the little altar we had made ourselves? And then we parted, just like a good many married folk do to-day. But I'm older now, and I love you a great deal more. Oh, a great deal more!"

Esther still further turned her head away, and Cecil drew her back.

"Now, don't turn away," he said. "I'm not going to rest until you toddle up to another altar and say another 'yes,' and this time I won't let you run away as you did before. I'm going to see your father to-day and ask his consent, now that I've got yours," he added confidently.

Esther looked at him, a bit startled, but he pressed her hand reassuringly.

"I've got yours, haven't I? Say it. Say yes," as she paused.

She nodded, just a little nod, but it was enough and he caught her in his arms. But Esther, after a moment of bliss, thought of her father and grew fearful.

"Oh, it will be no use now, I'm afraid."

"Why?" Cecil asked incredulously. "What do you mean?"

"Father told Adrian just now that if he married a Gentile he'd feel his life work was in vain. That may refer to me, too."

"Nonsense," Cecil replied stoutly.

"Father means everything he says," Esther insisted.

"So do I," Cecil answered, "and when I make up my mind to do anything, I always succeed, even if it takes years. Well, I'm going to succeed in winning you."

CHAPTER IX.

Hiring a Singer.

THE Lady Rebecca had allowed her social aspirations to run away with the native good sense which she had displayed in abundance while Sir Isaac, her husband, was struggling upward from poverty and obscurity to eminence and wealth. She had been a loyal helper in those early days of privation and hardship, but now, that the goal was won, her head had been somewhat turned.

Sir Isaac, always indulgent and kindly, had allowed her to go her own way, although secretly humiliated more than once by her arrogance and blunders. Since she had taken up Captain Trevor and showed that she meant to force him as a suitor for Esther, however, he had grown thoughtful.

He entered the empty drawing room a few minutes after Cecil and Esther went into the music room and he heard their voices and the strains of Hoffman softly played. The sound gave him pleasure. He was very fond of Cecil, and, although he strongly hoped that Adrian would marry one of his own race and religion, he would not have opposed the marriage of Esther and Sir John Cotswold's son. He was listening to the music when Lady Rebecca returned from her drive alone. Rather affectedly she sank down on the couch and launched at once into a discussion of her favorite project.

"I left Captain Trevor at his aunt's, Lady Galloway's, Isaac," she announced. "I do hope he'll propose to Esther. Think what such a marriage would mean to us. We'd be taken up everywhere—received everywhere."

"My dear Rebecca, you don't seem to understand," Sir Isaac remonstrated gently. "It isn't a question of who will take us up; it's a question of who we'll take up."

"But look at the advantages such a connection would mean to Adrian," Lady Rebecca insisted.

"I want Adrian to make his way as I did, without connections of that kind," Sir Isaac answered.

Lady Rebecca shrugged her shoulders in a way she had learned since she became an aspirant for social recognition, and turned from him peevishly.

"Now let me alone," she said. "My mind is made up. I know just what I am going to do."

Rock of Moses

THE "Rock of Moses" lies in the wild valley of the Leja at the base of Jebel Musa, the Mount of the Law, in the peninsula of Sinai. The rock is eighteen or twenty feet high, slightly inclined, a rough indention running over each side, which is intersected here and there with slits, and the stone is worn away in places as if from the effects of running water. It is without doubt the oldest legendary object in the vicinity.

The Koran refers to this rock more than once, and from these allusions arose the reverence of the Bedouins, who hold it sacred. From the Middle Ages onward it has been visited by Christian pilgrims who have carved rude crosses on its side. Of al the objects in the desert it is most closely bound up with the simple faith of its wild inhabitants and of its early visitants.—Strand.

Advice to the Lovelorn---By Beatrice Fairfax

NO HARM IN IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you please tell me if I did an improper thing by asking a young man whom I met while I was with my brother to call on me? Upon telling some one that I had done so, I was told that I should have waited for him to ask if he could call? Do you think it would prevent the young man from coming if it is improper?

P. B.

THERE was no harm in your inviting him to call. He could not very well have done so had you not invited him. If he is anxious to call he will be sure to do so, and your inviting him will not prevent but rather encourage him.

A LONG WAIT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have kept company with a young man for about four months. I saw him once a week, and heard from him three times a week. He is studying law, and therefore depends upon his folk for his expenses. His folk greatly object to his keeping company.

Two weeks ago he called me up and told me that some one had seen us one evening and had told his folk about it. They raised a fuss, and since then he has had quite some trouble. I asked him what he was going to do, and he simply said he did not care.

The other night I met him at a friend's house, and he hardly noticed me. The next morning I received a letter from him, telling me that his folk had commenced again upon the matter. In his letter he says that his folk or I must be sacrificed, and that we should stop for a while and not poison our folk by keeping company.

He said that it was a matter of "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," and that his feelings toward me would be the same in future as in the past. He ended by asking me to answer and let him know what I thought of it.

I answered and told him I felt quite sad over it. I asked him how long the wait was to be, etc. In answer to this he called my letter very biting. He said he could not marry before six years, and that making a promise six years before time was well nigh impossible, so "do as you please." I don't seem to be able to forget him. He has passed a few examinations, and do you think it proper for me to send him a card congratulating him?

L. A.

MY dear, I know that will be a hard thing to do, but I really think you had better put him out of your mind. Six years would be a very long time to wait, and I do not think his love would stand the test. If he really cared he would not have written as he did. It would be better not to send him a card of congratulation or to have any correspondence with him. Just try to forget him. Some day you will meet some man who will really care for you and appreciate your love.

British Pluck

EXTRAORDINARY conduct on the part of two men upon seeing the body of a woman in the water was disclosed at an inquest held at the Victory Inn on the Hogs Back, Surrey. A farm laborer named Sidney Smith missed his mother on Thursday morning, and on searching found her lying face upward in a roadside pond. He ran off, and another laborer named Matthews who passed the pond also ran away, neither making any effort to pull her out.

The Coroner: "The poor creature might not have been dead at that time. You could easily have got her out, I suppose?"

"I should have had to go up to my knees in the water."—London Daily Mail.

SOCIETY

DEBUTANTE JUNE BRIDE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Rarely, if ever, have I seen a handsomer or more radiantly happy bride than Barbara Hinckley, whose wedding to Edward Sohier Welch took place in Cambridge.

Miss Hinckley, who was one of last Winter's foremost debutantes, was pronounced a success from the moment of her entrance into the social realms of her smart world—she made her debut, became engaged and was married all in the same year—an enviable record for any girl, and with her handsome young husband, who has just taken his degree at Harvard, she is now speeding toward Montreal to sail from there tomorrow for Europe, where they are to spend the Summer.

Mrs. Welch's bridal gown was a handsome creation of white satin with bolero of heavy white Duchesse lace; her veil was of tulle, fastened with orange blossoms, and her bouquet was a shower of white sweet peas. Her only attendant was her young sister, still a school girl, the picture of sweet simplicity in a prettily fashioned gown of white chiffon over pale green satin and white hat trimmed with pale pink roses.

The ushers, most of whom were classmates of the bridegroom, had carefully concealed their bags of rice, and after the ceremony, just as the bride was entering her carriage they brought them forth—and havoc reigned for a time. The last I saw of the bride she was still ducking the pearly downpour.

Miss Pauline Webster was one of the prettiest of the younger girls there, and was looking exceptionally well in an Empire gown of pale blue satin and a large black picture hat.

Miss Amy Thorpe, grand-daughter of the poet Longfellow, and one of the bride's sister-buds was there with her mother and was at her loveliest, in a gown of salmon-pink satin and black plume-laden hat.

Mrs. Thorpe was in black and white striped chiffon and a lavendar hat trimmed with white plumes. Mrs. Hinckley, the bride's mother was in black Chantilley lac over white satin and Mrs. Welch, the mother of the groom was in white lace.

Dr. and Mrs. John Farlow are planning to sail for Europe the middle of the month and will remain abroad throughout the Summer.

Announcement was made yesterday at a luncheon given by Miss Julia R. Gilman, at her home on Commonwealth avenue, of the engagement of her niece, Miss Louise R. Gilman, daughter of Hon. and Mrs. A. W. Gilman of Foxcroft, Maine, to Leslie Raymond Rounds of Ithaca, N. Y.

Mrs. Gardner Bradley has come up from her home in Virginia and is the guest of her parents, the Samuel D. Warrens, at their beautiful Summer villa, to be on hand for the marriage, a week from to-day, of her brother Sam and Miss Thomas.

The Chapin Farm Agency has sold for the owner, Miss Margaret R. Frost of Stoneham, her old homestead farm on Spruce street, South Middleboro, comprising eight acres of land, an old colonial house, together with a barn and numerous outbuildings, flanked by a pine grove. The property was sold to Alfred H. Wyman of Bridgewater for investment, who has already taken possession.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

MASS MINING AGAIN BREAKS

STATE STREET, June 4.—Outside of Mass mining, local stocks were firm. Mass broke a point to 8½ on light transactions, which represents almost a 10 point break since Tuesday. Late advices from the mine give nothing encouraging regarding the mill run.

Attention was given mainly to the New York list, which was active and broad, although showing a reactionary tendency after the opening hour. Amalgamated yielded slightly to 87 on profit-taking. Lake moved up fractionally to 26¼ on favorable news from the mine, but selling orders wiped off a point from the high. Copper Range was firm at 82@82½ ex. dividend of $1. U. S. Steel worked off to 68¼, in sympathy with the reaction in New York.

Curb dealings were light, but at slightly better prices. Davis-Daly, Goldfield Consolidated and Ohio Copper were the active features there.

The average price received for copper by the leading producing mines during May was 13.228 cents per pound for lake and 12.893 cents for electrolitic.

The Boston Stock Exchange has listed $1,500,000 United States Rubber ten-year 6 per cent. collateral trust sinking fund gold bonds. It has stricken from the list 20,000 shares of Houston Electric Company and 10,000 shares of preferred as a majority of each has been exchanged for shares of the Galveston-Houston Electric Company.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW ROOM"—the most puzzling mystery story written in a decade—begins in Sunday's American.

FAIR SPEEDERS PAY A $15 FINE

Annie M. Phillips, a pretty young woman of No. 90 Bloomfield street, Dorchester, modishly clad, was fined $15 today by Judge Albert E. Avery in the Quincy District Court for flying along the Metropolitan Parkway to Quincy at the rate of thirty-one miles an hour. She refused to fight the case and paid the fine, peeling the bills off a big roll which she carried. Three other young women, clad in the height of fashion, accompanied the pretty defendant and made merry over the episode. They whirled back to Boston in a big touring car.

MEXICAN LOTTERY PLANT IS SEIZED

NEW YORK, June 4.—After a long and systematic search, which for months seemed in vain, the police and postal authorities have run down the headquarters of the Mexican Lottery in New York and have carried away the entire plant.

The man arrested was Charles O. Backus. The directory states that he is an agent at No. 122 Bowery. At this address is one of the largest lottery agencies in the country. Backus was in the midst of his work when the raiding party walked in.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, June 4.—Steel common daily volunteers to start all over again, unmindful of what has already been done. Those who at the end of every session believe that the campaigners must stop for breath, must allow some recuperation in the way of a reaction, are increasingly amazed at the progressive strength of the common. One large short contract in Steel common has been settled at 70½. Relatively dormant for a long time, the senior shares have given evidence of existence in the last few days only. Assuredly neither foreign nor domestic investors have become suddenly seized with an insatiable desire for the certificates. Speculation pure and simple is the keynote, but it was a speculative fever caught from the common shares, which the French syndicate was said to have bought at 63½ from Morgan, Harjes & Co.

$ $ $

Discretion has been thrown to the winds. Bank presidents and high financiers are talking of prices to be established shortly in such a way as to make the professional tipsters ashamed of themselves.

$ $ $

In London it is the same story as in New York, with Steel, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific leading an excited market. Morgan's success in listing Steel in Paris has excited all Europe over American securities. As Harriman nears Europe, the public imagination abroad is inflamed with expectations of vast bond issues and big profits for European investors. A friend of Harriman says that Mr. Harriman promised Union Pacific should be at 200 by the time he arrived in Europe. Friends of Morgan say that Steel preferred will be selling at 140 within a few days. Steel common has broken its high record on twelve consecutive days.

$ $ $

The peculiar feature of the Wall Street situation is that stocks are really not high at all when compared with the price of porterhouse steak, corn, wheat, clothing and rents. The public is looking with amazement at the prices in Wall Street without stopping to consider that prices of all commodities and rents are absurdly higher. Wall Street is simply adjusting itself to the general level. Beyond this there is little to say of the market. It is a tidal wave sweeping big and little before it. Even the leaders do not know how high the wave will rise or when it will begin the backward sweep that must leave desolation behind. No danger signals are visible.

$ $ $

Wall Street likes detailed reason, and one reason it gives for the advance in steel is that orders are being booked at such a rate as to promise at least $125,00,000 net earnings for 1909. The forthcoming financial plan is the reason for advance of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. Besides, they have been relatively too low. The Hill stocks and St. Paul advance because of the discovery that an agreement had been made between Northern Pacific and St. Paul for friendly rivalry between Chicago and the Pacific.

$ $ $

Preparations are being made for other movements, and the one most talked about is in Rock Island. Rock Island common and American Can shares are both strong and scheduled for honors immediately. The Rock Island outfit has been doing its work under the limelight recently, with the whole public taken into its confidence.

$ $ $

Numerous combinations, some of them new even to Wall street, are talked about. Perhaps the most important is that putting Lackawanna, Wabash and Rock Island into one combination. Judge W. H. Moore and E. H. Harriman are now the largest holders of the controlling securities in all of these companies. The Rock Island group almost lost control of their own property a few months ago, and shut Harriman out only by rushing the preferred stock to a price he would not pay. Although this merger rumor cannot be confirmed, it is considered probable in respectable quarters.

$ $ $

What Harriman foresaw in the early days of the McKinley administration he foresees in the early days of the Taft administration. A combination boom of Morgan and Harriman issues is to be sure, irresistible. The reluctance of the general market to follow Steel since early last week is overcome.

$ $ $

Another exciting rumor is to the effect that the Southern Pacific Company had sold all of its oil lands in California to the Standard Oil Company for $66,000,000. These lands have been estimated by experts to be worth at least $100,000,000. If sold for $66,000,000 it must be because Harriman has purchased stock in other railroads at such figures as to make it worth while to let the land go in order to get the spot cash. On the surface it looks like bad business to sell these lands because the Southern Pacific through their ownership is certain of cheap fuel through which it can save the interest on $200,000,000 every year.

PERIL IN RICHES WARNS WILSON

CONCORD, N. H., June 4.—"Schools like this one, and universities like Princeton, must pass out of existence unless they adapt themselves to modern life," said President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton at the close of St. Paul's School anniversary week.

"A danger surrounding our modern education is the danger of wealth. I am sorry for the lad who is going to inherit money, for it is no longer distinguished to be rich. The lad who is to inherit money is foredoomed to obscurity.

"You can't distinguished yourself by pleasure; you can't amuse yourself by adventure. I fear that the kind of men who are to share in shaping the future are not largely exemplified in schools and colleges.

"So far as the colleges go, the sideshows have swallowed up the circus, and we don't know what is going on in the main tent, and I don't know that I want to continue as ringmaster under these conditions. There are more honest occupations than teaching if you can't teach.

The great wonder is how folks that do things that way really need help. THE BOSTON AMERICAN WANT AD. WAY is so much surer, quicker—and really more economical.

Your Part in Making Boston the Finest City

The appointment of a Board of Directors of the Boston 1915 movement means that the work of making Boston the finest city in the world is to be pushed with vigor. It is an excellent group of PUBLIC-SPIRITED CITIZENS, who will have the task of working out practical plans for the welfare of the city. A wide variety of trades and professions is represented in this body—men of wealth, men that have the courage of their convictions, men of resourcefulness, men of zeal for the BETTERMENT OF THEIR CITY, men of earnestness in the cause of civic righteousness—citizens all of a great city that is to be made better and greater by the united effort of all organizations, in every department of endeavor.

Here is the list of names:

Bernard J. Rothwell, president of Boston Chamber of Commerce.
James L. Richards, president of Boston Consolidated Gas Company.
George S. Smith, president of Boston Clothiers' Association.
Louis D. Brandeis, attorney and publicist.
John H. Fahey, publisher.
Edward A. Filene.
Dr. Richard C. Cabot, assistant professor in Harvard Medical School, physician to out-patients in Massachusetts General Hospital.
Judge Michael H. Sullivan, president of United Improvement Associations.
Rev. Father Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College.
Henry Abrahams, secretary of Boston Central Labor Union.
Joseph C. Pelletier, member of Massachusetts Civil Service Commission.
Arthur M. Huddell, secretary of International Union of Steam Engineers.
Robert A. Woods, head of South End House.
James P. Munroe, chairman of Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.
Frank A. Day, banker, of firm of R. L. Day & Co.
Rev. John Hopkins, Denison, minister of Central Church.

And soon we should have in detail some of the plans for making Boston the finest city in the world. It is going to be a HARD JOB, with the proposed new city charter, that takes away every right that the voters now have. Still the work must go on under the new charter and with LODGE'S DICTATORSHIP, if we must have him as dictator.

Perhaps, in time, the people will be permitted to govern themselves. That would be the obvious first step in making the finest city. No BOSS-RULED CITY can ever rise above its source—GRAFT.

The people must govern themselves. Make that possible, and all the other necessary things can be quickly added. Put an end to bossism. Stop the interference of the State with the city's affairs. Put an end to State police rule. Abolish obsolete laws. Give the city to the people. Tax the rich as well as the poor. Put the initiative, the referendum and the recall into operation—DO ALL OF THESE THINGS and you have THE BASIS FOR THE FINEST CITY.

How can this be done? Only by AWAKENING PUBLIC CONSCIENCE. The public must be made to feel an interest in their city. There is not enough public spirit in Boston just now. The 1915 committee must re-awaken it.

There are many grave problems for this committee to solve:

Wider and better streets.
Better transportation facilities.
Better homes for the poor.
Means to add new and desirable citizens to our city.

Some plan of publicity to bring the shoppers and merchants of New England TO BOSTON to purchase their wares and merchandise, instead of to New York or Chicago.

Some effective plan to advertise the permanency and value of New England investments, in land, mills and industrial corporations.

Devise a way to put an end to the diversion of funds for investment from New England to the West and South.

The directors of the 1915 movement are to be the ARCHITECTS, REMODELLERS AND BUILDERS of the finest city. They are all able men of affairs. But they can do nothing without YOUR help. These gentlemen are giving their time and money to help YOU, YOUR CHILDREN AND YOUR CHILDREN'S CHILDREN. They do not ask for your money.

The 1915 movement is an appeal for betterment in every department of city life—better schools, better churches, better city government, better streets, better laws, better homes, better hospitals, better railroad service, better newspapers, better stores, better hotels, better wages—EVERYTHING BETTER THAN IT IS AT PRESENT.

In a short time plans will be presented so that every individual in the city can help in this great movement. Each will have his own place in the great plan and his own work to do.

The 1915 movement is for YOUR BENEFIT, And it cannot succeed without YOUR HELP.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By William F. Kirk

IT was raising awful hard the other nite wen Pa calm hoam, & he had a big bundel of birds in his hand, they was awful wet & looked like our heas wen they git caught in the rain.

Wen Pa calm into the flat he dropped all them wet birds & sed, Hoam at last. Hoam at last.

I am glad you are hoam, sed Ma, but what is that you have in yure possesshun?

That is game, sed Pa. I bought every bit of it. It cost me thirty dollers, sed Pa, every cent wich I have in the world. I was intending to bring twenty of that mussy hoam, sed Pa, but I did not, owing to circumstances outer wich I have no control outer.

The price of beef has gone up! sed Pa. The cow has jumped outer the moon. In one (1) way, sed Pa, that is dee-pressing news, but in a other pay I am glad that the price of beef has gone up, beckaus that ought to mak men like Bill Taft & me almost priceless. Eether of us cud git a grate price now, sed Pa, if we was sould at so much a pound on the hoof.

That is neether here nor thare, sed Ma. The grate point is, will you please explain how these miserabul wet hens cost thirty (30) dollers. I fere you are dibbing, sed Ma. Cum acrost with a explanashun, Ma sed, or talk them fowls back ware you got them & git the munny.

Parding me, sed Pa, you are mistaken about the species & gennyus of these poor ded songsters wich I have brought hoam to keep the wolf from the door until the price of beef gose down agenn. They are not hens, sed Pa. They are anything but hens.

This one here, sed Pa, cost me six (6) dollars. It is a golden plover, sed Pa, wich is found, mostly, in the wild moors of Moorhead, Minnesoty. This other one (1) on the left, sed Pa, is a canvas back duck, one (1) of the most cuntly that has ever been taken ded or alive. It set me back eight ($8) iron men, wich cain vary neer killing a ten spot. It is a noabel burd, sed Pa, & will keep us in food for many days. Let me see, sed Pa, how much does that make?

That maiks fourteen ($14) dollars, sed Ma. Sixteen dollers still remain to be accounted for.

Well, sed Pa, cover here on the right is a Oregon owl. This splendid burd, sed Pa, was shot by a freend of Mister Roosevelt wich was hunting just outside of Portland.

After a severere battel, Pa sed, during wich en-gagement seving shots was fired, this grate burd was brought to erth, & I thught it the minuit that I cuim into the Butcher shop. It stood me seven smacks, wich left me only nine dollars with wich to keep on buying meat.

Here on the extreem rear, sed Pa, is the last of my grate collecksshun. This is a Plainfield Pheasant, sed Pa, wich was shot by a hunter naimed Hicks one morning about ten (10) o'clock after he had waited all nite to get a good chaunt to shoot. It was valued by the butcher at ten bucks, sed Pa, but I finally grabbed it for nine. That maiks up the thirty, does it not? sed Pa.

It does, sed Ma, according to yure figgering, but not according to mine. Give me a look at them specimens, sed Ma. Why, sed Ma, these is all alike, thay are all chickings. You shud have got the bunch of them for not more than four (4) dollers.

They are not chickings, sed Pa.

They are chickings, sed Ma, every one (1) of them.

Well, sed Pa, have it yure own way. I do not maik war on wimmen, sed Pa. That is one of my principuls, never to scrap with my wife. I hate a argument, Pa sed.

I dount see any room for a argument, sed Ma. They are chickings.

All right, all right, sed Pa. As I sed beefore, have it yure own way. What with the price of beef going up, sed Pa, & other expenses, I am too sick at hart to argue with you, but thay cost me thirty dollers anyway. Then Pa went to bed.

After Pa went to bed Ma looked in his pocket & found twenty-four ($24) dollers. Ma is a good looker.

An Up-to-Date Novel

By Wex Jones

PAULINE PEPPER saw an old man being dragged to jail.

"This old man has a kind face," said she. "He cannot have done anything bad enough to deserve such a fate as this."

"But he has," said a bystander. "He played in a band one Sunday on the way to church."

Appalled by the crime, Pauline nevertheless resolved to help the prisoner.

With a few passes she hypnotized the officers, and, telling them that they were canaries, watched them fly away warbling.

In gratitude the old man gave his benefactor $5,750,000.

With this sum Pauline went to a restaurant and bought a steak.

This left her with $750,000.

Picking up a magazine, she read the railroad and steamship advertisements, and began to long for the life of the open or the excitement of visiting foreign lands.

After careful inquiry Pauline found that to get close to nature in Maine would use up the remainder of her fortune, and that the rent of a single camp in the mountains was a million dollars for the season, July 3-5.

So Pauline decided to visit Europe, and took passage on the fastest liner.

As the captain, stop-watch in hand, approached the coast, he went an order to the engineers to slow down.

To quiet some of the passengers, the captain explained that he could not afford to break the transatlantic record by more than thirty seconds, as otherwise he would not have enough left in reserve to break it on every trip. And would consequently lose a lot of advertising.

On landing in England Pauline observed unusual excitement. Some natives were running wildly about; others were writing letters to The Times.

It appeared that a cloud had been observed to pass over Southampton, and the authorities were convinced that it was a German war airship in disguise.

"What could be easier," said the local paper, "for the treacherous but scientific Germans to surround an enormous Zeppelin with a cloud and thus sneak across the channel and land their deadly freight in this unsuspecting country?

"We advise the war office to keep all the troops under arms every cloudy day! We must be on the alert!"

Paulne at first thought this scare was merely amusing, but soon she was to experience its annoyances.

One windy day, her hat blew off, and, as it was borne over the roof of a house, was observed by a policeman. With a wild yell of "The Germans" he rushed to the barracks to make out, was his duty, a full written report of the incident. (Officers showing the best written and best spelled reports at the end of the year are promoted for their efficiency.)

When the hat finally came back to earth Pauline claimed it, but the general suspicion that she was a German spy forced her to leave the country.

Coming back to Boston, she invested her remaining $250,000 in eggs and made a small omelette.

She has now a horticultural position—in a roof garden.

African Fable

The Rhinoceros, as everybody is aware, has a very snub nose, and the Rhinoceros was painfully sensative about it.

It didn't soothe the Rhino a bit to have his nose referred to as "tip-tilled," and to say it was "retrousse" didn't help much, either. The nose was so very turned-up.

So at last the Rhino went to a Beauty Doctor and Facial Engineer, and after weeks of steaming and fooling the turned-up nose was turned down until it pointed gracefully ahead like the jib-boom of a yacht.

In this condition the Rhino became involved in an argument with a Lion, and, according to his custom, charged his opponent with great vigor.

But instead of tossing the Lion up in the air, the Rhino's nose missed him altogether.

The Life of Pharaoh Smith

By C. B. Quincy

FURTHER researches among the hieroglyphics to be found in the tomb of Pharaoh Smith, the early Egyptian, throw some light upon the curious customs of the inhabitants of the Nile country.

Hilo, where Pharaoh was accustomed to spend the Summers, is depicted in most of the newly discovered tablets. In the first we have what most Egyptologists consider a history representing the development of the bathing suit.

The first figure on the left shows the original bathing suit, resembling a gunny sack, and extending to the ankles. The next shows the shortening of the skirt and the improvement of the cut, while the next three show its further development to what looks like the modern Directoire. Then we see two men clad in the same old rig, showing man's hopeless lack of fashion.

The next tablet

shows Pharoah Smith's Summer camping life. In the first picture we see him luxuriously stretched on the sand in front of his servants, but the consensus of opinion is that it shows a few mosquitoes. In the door of the tent may be seen a barricade erected by Smith to keep out his enemies; while next is represented a sandstorm—the waves are seen splashing over the tent, which is finally blown away, leaving Smith on the sand.

Next we have what appears to be representations of Hite scenes.

In the first a barker for a restaurant is evidently showing soft shell crab as a sample, a small child from inland Egypt recoiling in terror. Then we see the Egyptians who go down to the shore for fresh air and exercise all seated in a stuffy theater watching a variety show. The two in the next picture are being photographed, and in the last we see the office teller asleep at his work, worn out by his day of rest and recreation.
